D. C. Officials Plan 3-Point Reform Move At Gallinger

Home Deliveries, Vacant Building Use, Externe Service Mapped.

First Goal Relief Of Overcrowding

New Convalescent Care, Infant Mortality Cut to Be Stressed.

A three-point program, in process of formation for several months to relieve overcrowding of Gallinger Hospital, was disclosed yesterday by Health Department officials in wake of The Post's revelation of deplorable conditions at the municipal institution.

The plan calls for:

1. Promotion and encouragement of "home delivery" service, already begun to relieve congestion in the hospital's maternity ward.
2. Use of the Upshur street tuberculosis hospital building, now vacant, as a convalescent home, making for economy as well as improved service to patients.
3. Building up an extern medical service.

Strikes at Crowding.

Striking first at overcrowding condition in obstetrical wards, Health Officer George C. Ruhland stated:

"Confronted with the problem of space limitation it was decided that an attempt be made through co-ordination of the nursing clinics and the health department, to prevent this overcrowding at Gallinger by assigning certain cases to deliveries in the home."

Home conditions of expectant mothers have been thoroughly investigated by the nursing service and in certain cases it was found that deliveries in the home were feasible and advisable, the health department announced.

Since this program was inaugurated, more than 42 per cent of the patients who otherwise would have been delivered at the hospital will now have their deliveries at home.

Better Care in Homes.

"This fact clearly indicates that some overcrowding already has been relieved." Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, commented. "In addition this will result in a proportionate reduction in the per diem cost of the obstetrical service at Gallinger and will give the doctors and nurses of the Gallinger staff the opportunity of providing better care for those in the hospital."

"Washington has meager facilities for care of convalescents," Dr. Seckinger continued. "According to recognized standards there should be available 50 convalescent beds for every 100,000 of population."

There are only 72 convalescent beds in Washington, Dr. Seckinger said.

300 Beds Needed.

"We should provide at least 300 beds for convalescent patients," he said. "This would mean a substantial decrease of the overcrowded condition at Gallinger."

The third and final plan of the program would be promotion of extern medical service.

A medical extern was described as a young, practicing physician on the hospital staff from which hospital he is engaged to extern service.

"Many patients come into the hospital and really do not belong there," Dr. Seckinger said. "In many cases, the patient could be treated by one of the hospital staff physicians in the patient's home."

Infant Mortality Cited.

The practical result of this type of service is to reduce the number of admissions to hospitals and so re-

C.I.O. Unit Calls Strike at Ford St. Louis Plant

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 24.—A long-expected battle between the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers of America and the Ford Motor Co. materialized today in a strike which failed, however, to halt operations of the St. Louis assembly plant.

Milton N. Johnson, plant manager, asserting "Ford employes are satisfied and want to work," said 584 manned the assembly lines, only 16 less than yesterday. The union contended only 100 to 125 men entered the building.

1,000 on Picket Line.

The workers went to their jobs through one of the heaviest picket lines in the city's history, more than 1,000 men, many of them members of sympathetic C. I. O. unions, swarming around the plant.

A few non-strikers who came on foot suffered severe beatings before being rescued by police, who plunged in with clubs to restore peace.

The greater majority of the workers, as if by prearrangement, arrived in automobiles which were ushered into the company parking lot through police lines. An Associated Press staff member counted a dozen trips made by one automobile. The driver had a pearl-handled revolver on his lap.

There were few disorders.

As members of the other C. I. O. unions—garment, steel, electrical and gas house workers—went to their own jobs elsewhere, the picket lines dwindled until only about 150 remained to parade in front of the plant's two main entrances.

Chest Workers To Spurn Rest For Plea Today

New Campaign Battles Are Mapped on Several Fronts in Drive.

Determined workers in the Community Chest drive will turn Thanksgiving into a day of toil in an effort to erase a $297,000 deficit.

Leaders yesterday mapped new campaign battles on half a dozen fronts in response to demands from workers in all divisions of the organization for extension of the drive to next Tuesday.

The District Commissioners took a hand when, in issuing their Thanksgiving proclamation, they took cognizance of the possibility that the season of harvest and plenty might be made a mockery for part of the populace by failure of the drive.

Plea Voiced to Public.

In recognition of the emergency, the Commissioners urged that "the people of the District of Columbia, as they enter upon their observance of this Thanksgiving Day, give thought to the dire needs of their fellow citizens, who are dependent upon their bounty, and having reflected upon these things, again search their hearts and their purses to see whether they have done their full part in the Community Chest campaign."

The spirit of the proclamation and the earnestness of the workers were caught up at once by citizens, who sent a stream of voluntary contributions flowing into Chest headquarters as soon as the campaign extension became known.

$30,000 Betting Fee to Mailman Charged in W. Va. Bank Fraud

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 24.—John Samuel Kelly, a city mail carrier here, has admitted receiving $30,000 in betting commissions from J. Richard Russell, former assistant cashier of the defunct Farmers Bank & Trust Co., officials said late today.

The letter carrier was held at Elkins, W. Va., on a charge of "aiding and abetting" Russell, who last week entered pleas of guilty to two indictments alleging embezzlement after discovery of shortages estimated at $500,000.

United States deputy marshals arrested Kelley at his apartment here Tuesday night. Admission of the huge commissions was obtained by H. A. Bankert, Federal special agent, who questioned the prisoner at Elkins.

Arraigned before a United States commissioner, Kelly pleaded not guilty to the aiding and abetting charge. He was remanded to jail when unable to furnish $10,000 bond.

According to Deputy Marshal J. C. Repep, at Elkins, Kelley said he placed bets for Russell under impression he was acting for a third party. He did not know the money belonged to the now closed bank, he asserted.

Kelly, 38 years old, is widely known in Charles Town, where he has worked as a mail carrier for 15 years. He seldom missed a day on his route.

A native of the city, his reputation was of the finest. He dressed and lived quietly and modestly, making his home in a small apartment in the center of town.

President Will Eat His Turkey Dinner at White House.

Church Services Also to Mark Anniversary of Constitution.

The people of the United States, without regard to race, quality, creed or station, will unite today in observing Thanksgiving.

President Roosevelt, forced to postpone his customary Thanksgiving trip to Warm Springs, Ga., because of an infected tooth, is expected to remain indoors over the holiday, but will enjoy a turkey dinner at the White House.

Thousands of Washingtonians will follow the President's example of observing the holiday quietly at home, but will first attend special services at the churches throughout the city.

20,000 to Visit Cathedral.

Arrangements to accommodate more than 20,000 persons have been made for the national Thanksgiving service to be held at 11 a. m. today a the Washington Cathedral. This service, sponsored by the Bishop, Dean and Chapter of Washington Cathedral and the Grand Lodge of Masons of the District of Columbia, will commemorate the sesquicentennial of the formation of the Constitution of the United States.

One of the most colorful services will be at St. Patrick's Church, where diplomatic representatives of South American nations and officials of the Pan American Union have been invited to attend a special Pan-American mass at 10:30 a. m. The apostolic delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, will pontificate at the mass.

Jewish Churches Plan Rites.

Local Jewish churches will mark the day with joint services at 11 a. m. at Adas Israel Synagogue. Principal address will be delivered by Rabbi J. T. Loeb, of the Southeast Hebrew Congregation.

The program will include an opening prayer by Rabbi Henry Segal, "Ma Tovu" by Cantor Louis Novick and choir, introductory remarks by Rabbi Solomon Metz, Bible reading by Rabbi M. H. Levinson, responsive reading by Rabbi Zemach Green, psalm recital by Rabbi Harry Silverstone, reading of the President's proclamation by Rabbi Abram Simon, adoration and kaddish by Rabbi Aaron Volkman and closing benediction by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld.

Nearly all Government employes and business workers will have the day off. The central building of the Public Library at Eighth and K streets northwest and all branches and sub-branches throughout the city will be closed all day. The Library of Congress however will be open from 2 to 10 p. m.

Dinner for Strangers.

Strangers who are lonely may eat their turkey dinner in interesting company at the "Strangers Dutch Treat" Thanksgiving dinner at the Shoreham Hotel. This event was originated four years ago, by Dr. Grace A. Thompson and has on holidays attracted as many as 100 strangers.

A specially-prepared turkey dinner will be served to the boys and girls of Children's and Gallinger Hospitals. Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent at Children's Hospital, has arranged an entertainment program to follow the dinner.

Miss Dorothy Ireland, supervisor

Fair and Warmer But Still Nippy Is Today's Forecast

Thanksgiving celebrants can expect fair skies and warmer temperature today but, the Weather Bureau announced, the air probably will be nippy enough to be in keeping with the season.

Yesterday's maximum temperature was 49, the minimum 23 degrees at 6 a. m. Officials say it's going to be warmer today. If their prediction holds true, those attending the Catholic University-South Carolina football game may not need raccoon coats generally associated with late-season games.

Rain is predicted for tomorrow.

Connery's Car Seized On Parking Violation

Lawrence J. Connery, Representative from Massachusetts, learned yesterday that his automobile, which he believed lost or stolen, had been confiscated by the police for a parking violation.

Police excused him from the usual $5 towing fee when he explained that he was not yet familiar with parking regulations here. Connery took his oath of office last week.

Greyhound's Strike Fails to Cripple D. C.

A strike affecting all Greyhound bus lines in Washington and 14 States east of the Mississippi River went into effect at 12:01 a. m. today, with operations in this area only slightly affected.

C. E. Hice, Washington organizer for the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, the union calling the strike, said more than 100 union bus drivers operating in this area had been called out. He called a secret meeting of the strikers to consider action in face of the apparent failure of the union to hold up scheduled runs.

One bus from Philadelphia on a scheduled run to Richmond via Washington discharged about 20 passengers at the line's terminal at Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest, but according to Harold Hoffman, operations superintendent for this section, the run to the Virgina capital was continued by another driver.

Philadelphia Halts Trips

Bus line officials in Philadelphia conceded the effectiveness of the strike there where the union called out more than 100 drivers. They said no buses would operate from Philadelphia unless orders were received from Cleveland.

A score of passengers, the Associated Press reported, left waiting aboard the Miami limited were given their money back. Dispatchers told passengers for Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa., that tickets would be honored by another line.

The Broad Street terminal of the line was being picketed, the Associated Press reported.

Rear Entrance Used.

Hice claimed all operations at the New York avenue northeast garage of the line had been tied up, but his contention was denied by Hoffman, who said buses were being taken out a rear entrance of the garage by nonstriking drivers.

Metropolitan police were maintaining special details at both the garage and terminal, watchful for outbreak of disorders. The terminal was seething with excitement. Long lines of passengers idled about the waiting room.

Detectives on Duty.

Many plainclothesmen, hired by the company to preserve order, were evident in the throng. All buses leaving the terminal after the midnight strike deadline set by leaders carried an extra driver in plain clothes.

L. C. Major, regional manager in charge of operations between Washington, New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago, denied reports the company detectives and extra drivers were armed.

The strike became effective at the midnight deadline with the failure of last-minute conciliation efforts at headquarters for the company in Cleveland. Federal Labor Conciliation

'Hi Sweetie,' Says Lord Tweedsmuir, Modernizing Bard

Toronto, Nov. 24. (AP)—Canada's Governor General Lord Tweedsmuir tonight put Shakespeare into what he termed the words of Hollywood.

Speaking on masterpieces of literature, Lord Tweedsmuir said Shakespeare's songs were a high-water mark of lyrical beauty, "the only possible words in the only possible order."

"O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear! Your true love's coming."

Lord Tweedsmuir, who as John Buchan is a well-known novelist, said the Hollywood version would be thus:

"Hi sweetie, where you gettin' to?
Your big boy's here and pettin' you,
And he's the guy that rings the bell.
Say, kid, quit hikin' and sit nice,
For shaking feet don't cut no ice,
The goopiest mut can tell."

$100,000,000 Power Expansion Forecast by Carlisle, Utility Chief

Magnate Convinced of Need After Parley With President.

Entire Program Would Cost Billion

Fears of Governmental Competition Have Abated, Is Belief.

On National Front.

Chairman Carlisle, of Consolidated Edison and Niagara Hudson Power companies, announced after a talk with President Roosevelt he would take up at once a $100,000,000 two-year expansion program for his companies.

Proposals that the President publicly take leadership in determining speed of tax relief grew out of Capitol conferences.

President Roosevelt yesterday achieved his first concrete success in his effort to allay apprehensions of the private electrical utilities and persuade that industry to go ahead immediately with a billion-dollar needed expansion program.

Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the Consolidated Edison Co. and the Niagara Hudson Power Co., after spending 90 minutes in conference with the President, announced he was going back to New York to take up immediately the possibilities of expanding facilities of his companies "all along the line." He estimated cost of such a program would be approximately $100,000,000 over the next two years.

Carlisle said he had "a very happy discussion" with the President and that he believed that "the fears of Government competition have been very much lessened as

Mrs. Norton Says 218 Will Sign Wage Petition by Wednesday

11 More Ask Discharge of Committee in Move to Force Vote.

By Sidney Olson.

With 180 signatures scrawled on the petition to force the wages-hours bill to the House floor, Chairman Mary Norton of the House Labor Committee predicted last night the 218 signatures which will force a vote will be achieved by next Wednesday.

Mrs. Norton, visibly showing the strain of a strenuous day's skirmishing with opponents of the bill, based her first flatly optimistic prediction partly on a statement from the House majority leader, Sam Rayburn, of Texas, who said:

"We'll get the signatures. I can't say when, but it'll be in time. I expect two 'big' names to go on there tomorrow, and they'll drag a flock of others after them."

Shanghai (Thursday), Nov. 25.—Soviet Russia today was reported consolidating her control of large areas in northern China preparatory to resisting Japanese penetration of these districts which long have been linked economically with the U. S. S. R.

Two American photographers—Arthur Menken, of Paramount Newsreel, and Eric Mayell, of Fox Movietone—reached Nanking after a three-week tour of Shansi and Shensi provinces, and told the United Press "we saw scads of Bolshevik airplanes in Sianfu (capital of Shensi) where the Russians themselves were in charge of the air field and refused us permission to take news photographs."

"A Chinese aviator told us that 1,000 Soviet planes—bombers and pursuit ships—had been flown into China from Russia via Lanchow, Kansu Province, and sent to points in the interior. He added that Russia had promised another 1,000 planes," the cameraman said.

Observers here thought these figures probably were exaggerated, but they did believe Moscow was lending considerable support to the pro-Soviet Chinese armies.

Democrats Ask Tax Relief Cue From President

New Deal Friends in House and Senate Urge Action by Administration.

By Robert C. Albright.

Proposals that President Roosevelt publicly take the leadership in determining how quickly receding business may expect tax relief yesterday grew out of a behind-the-scenes struggle at the Capitol over tax policy and procedure.

As the "immediate action" bloc registered gains in the Senate and House, one high official proposed the alternative course of a reassuring Administration statement on tax intentions.

Sentiment in favor of the undivided profits tax change has crystalized in both House and Senate, but tax revisionists have been hesitant to act without the President's stamp of approval. The President again was reported opposed to "hasty" action and to favor the slower "next session" program now being mapped by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Majority leaders on both sides of the Capitol support the President's views, but some members influential in party councils yesterday were pressing for an immediate stroke to reassure business by modifying ex-

Dime Store Sells $2,500 Lost Pearls As 15-Cent Bauble

New York Nov. 24 (U.P.).—Somewhere in New York a woman is wearing Patricia Ryan's $2,500 strand of pearls after paying 15 cents for them at a dime store.

Yesterday she discovered her mistake. The store manager said the pearls probably had been sold for 15 cents.

Jury of Children Likes Mural, So It Will Stay at Glenn Dale

The Mother Goose mural at Glenn Dale Sanitarium is there to stay, whether it's art or not.

The controversial painting, which covers one wall of the waiting room in the new children's hospital, was inspected yesterday by a jury of six elementary school pupils. None of the students gave the picture a grade of 100, but all agreed it was interesting to children.

Their comments, taken down verbatim by a stenographer, were turned over to Commissioner George E. Allen. He said last night, "I accept the report of the children. The painting will remain at the Glenn Dale Sanitarium." He believes the report is "the answer to the much disputed question."

Five white children, two boys and three girls, and one colored boy, who comprised the jury, arrived at their verdict in a complete vacuum. Their parents had been requested not to discuss the mural at home. The children were not told why they were getting a morning off from school to look at a picture.

When they arrived at the sanitarium, Miss Ida M. Lind, director of elementary instruction and chaperone of the expedition, hustled them through the waiting room so they could form no premature opinions. Then, one by one, they were ushered before the mural and urged to say their say to Miss Lind and the stenographer.

New Farm Bill Offered House; Action Pushed

Rep. Jones' Measure Provides Milder Compulsory Rules.

A new and slightly modified farm bill was introduced in the House yesterday while the Senate battled through its second day of debate on a quilt-work crop control measure carrying drastic penalties to enforce it.

The House compulsory bill was introduced by Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, which will vote on the bill tomorrow. Leaders plan to call up the measure in the House next Monday and attempt to obtain action within three days.

Charges of unconstitutionality against the Senate measure, and complaints of an attempt to expand the dairy industry by injecting "new competition," rang out on the other side of the Capitol.

Penalties Milder.

Like the Senate bill, the Jones measure introduced yesterday would set up control programs for corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and rice, but would impose less drastic penalties on marketing of surpluses.

Neither measure provides means of financing the new program, which may cost upward of $250,000,000 in excess of the $500,000,000 soil conservation program. It appeared this task would fall to the Ways and Means Committee, already in the throes of general tax revision. Jones indicated he would ask for "not less than" $100,000,000 in additional revenue to finance benefit payments.

Under the House bill virtually completed yesterday, the soil conservation program and benefits would be continued, but payments would be withheld from producers of the five commodities not complying with new acreage adjustment aims.

The Senate bill goes farther in barring loans and payments to farmers not co-operating. Soil conservation payments in excess of $2,000 would be cut 25 per cent under the House measure, with landlords who share with tenants exempted from the reduction.

Other Changes Made.

Other provisions of the House measure:

Acreage allotments annually on a tilled acreage basis. In the case of cotton, rice and tobacco, land tilled in the five preceding calendar years would determine acreage allotments. For wheat and corn—acreage tilled in the ten preceding years.

Quota limitations on marketing of wheat, corn, tobacco and rice, and on acreage planted by cotton farmers, would be invoked by the Secretary of Agriculture whenever two-thirds of the growers of a given commodity voted "yes" in a national referendum.

Authority for the Commodity Credit Corporation, on recommendation of the Secretary and the President, to make available loans on agricultural commodities, including dairy products. Loans would be made on stored surpluses to carry out the ever normal granary principle. This phase of the Senate bill is restricted to wheat and corn.

Provision for apportionment of any additional revenue raised to finance the program among all major agricultural commodities on the same pro rata basis on which they now share benefits.

Cotton quotas would be established when the Secretary proclaimed a surplus of 15 per cent over so-called normal supply. Sales of cotton grown on excess acres would be subject to a penalty of 2 cents a pound. (The Senate bill exacts 75 per cent penalty.)

Tobacco Quotas Arranged

For tobacco, marketing quotas would be announced whenever the total supply exceeds the normal supply, plus a 5 per cent reserve supply. Purchasers of over-quota tobacco would be fined 50 per cent of price, as under the Senate bill.

Marketing quotas for corn would be fixed when the surplus over normal supply was over 15 per cent. Quotas would apply to producers in commercial corn-producing areas, including the entire State of Iowa and portions of Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky. Other areas would be exempted. Penalty on excess sales would be 15 cents a bushel.

Wheat marketing quotas would go into effect when normal supply was exceeded by more than 25 per cent, and here also a 15-cent-a-bushel penalty would be exacted on excess sales. (The Senate bill provides for voluntary acreage control contracts, and parity payments for co-operators, on both wheat and corn. A 50 per cent penalty was levied on over-quota sales).

Rice quotas would apply when so-called "reserve supply" was exceeded, and under the House bill a one-quarter cent penalty per pound would be charged for excess marketing. (The Senate bill imposed a penalty of ½ cent a pound).

In the Senate yesterday, Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, opened the second day of defense of the more hastily drawn Senate bill, as Majority Leader Barkley drove for action on the measure within a week.

Pope tried to champion the measure against attacks on its constitutionality, citing Supreme Court opinions in an effort to show interstate commerce powers of Congress are broad enough to uphold the proposed program.

"In this bill," Pope maintained, "Congress does not seek as it did in the agricultural adjustment act (invalidated), to regulate directly agricultural production for the purpose of bringing relief to the farmer and improving the general welfare of the United States."

But Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, a stanch Administration supporter, asserted "it would be a bold man who would insist with any degree of certainty that the bill we are considering is constitutional." Logan said the bill was satisfactory to him, aside from the constitutional question.

Politics and People

Peace Between New Deal and Utilities Appears Possible After Bitter Fight.

By Franklyn Waltman

AT long last a truce appears possible between the Roosevelt Administration and the private electrical power industry in their confusing, raucous battle of the last four years. Entertaining as that public display of fisticuffs has been for those who like such spectacles, few people have an understanding of what the tumult and shouting was about—and fewer even cared.

WALTMAN.

The public generally has been on the New Deal side because as a general principle it is always popular to assail corporate wealth and because in this specific instance a small element of the utility industry in the past conducted affairs with neither ethics nor sanity and mulcted consumers of millions of dollars. This led the politicians to believe fighting the utilities was a good campaign issue.

Except in communities where the public utilities have acted in extremely disgraceful fashion, the public, however, has never been aroused over the power issue. If that had been the paramount issue in Mr. Roosevelt's two Presidential campaigns, he would not have reached first base. The average man on the whole is satisfied with the service he receives from the public utilities because it does not cost him a great deal and the service generally is good. Of course, he will take lower rates whenever he can get them. But he will not go out and fight for them.

Thus, the fight between the New Deal and the utilities has gone on, kept alive chiefly by a few loud-talking wild-eyed reformers—most of whom believe in State socialism—on the Government side, and a group of die-hard, utility-Tom Girdlers on the utility side. The conciliators and the moderates on each side, those who realize that the public utilities must have a chance but that they should be decent and reasonable in their operations, were submerged by the noisy extremists.

For instance, it is doubtful whether President Roosevelt sincerely is as radical on the power question as David Lilienthal. If he were, he would have named three Lilienthals to administer the TVA and would not have kept Dr. Arthur Morgan as chairman of the authority to offset and curb Mr. Lilienthal. It is true that Mr. Roosevelt does not particularly like the electrical utilities, and that he also loves a good fight. But it is doubtful whether he ever wanted the fight to go to the finish.

This was made for much of the confusion and lack of definite policy in the electrical power situation and for that Mr. Roosevelt must accept responsibility. But let it be noted that Mr. Roosevelt seems willing to stop the fight when it becomes certain that the country as a whole will be hurt by it. When Mr. Roosevelt was confronted by a situation, instead of theories, he intervened. Although the die-hards in the utility industry are whispering that he cannot be trusted, he appears, at least, to desire a working agreement with the utilities.

The situation which inspired the President to act was the fact that so much Government competition had been threatened, so much undiscriminating abuse had been heaped on the private utilities, so irresponsible had been the actions of some New Deal spokesmen, that the managers and owners of the private utilities had become afraid to advance with needed billions of dollars of expansion plans. In view of the industrial recession, this became serious.

Mr. Roosevelt has gone to work to replace fear with confidence on the part of the utilities. Although he has not publicly announced any reversal in major policies, he apparently already has created a better feeling. How? By utilizing one of the oldest and most successful devices in the art of conciliation — emphasizing points in agreement rather than stressing the points of disagreement.

For instance, Mr. Roosevelt has pointed out to reasonable men among the utility managers in the last few days the fact that between 80 and 90 per cent of the electrical power field remains in their hands. So much emphasis had been placed in the past on the Government's encroachments that the figures cited by the President were overlooked.

Moreover, Mr. Roosevelt reminded these utility managers that despite Government competition, their business and revenues are increasing. He pointed out to them the market waiting to be supplied with electrical power, and reminded them that he is determined to stimulate home building, which will increase the demand for power.

He might also have pointed out to these utilities another silver lining, and that is that the Government's program, whatever damage it has done to them, has made the country electrical power conscious, and has created a desire for power on the part of domestic consumers. The Government has done a promotion job for the utilities which would have cost them millions of dollars.

Mr. Roosevelt might have pointed out to the utilities that the sale of residential power last year was more than 50 per cent greater than in the 1929 boom year—that this year the utilities had 1,166,000 farm customers, compared with 506,242 in 1929—that residential customers had increased by more than 2,500,000 in the same period—and that the consumption per residential and farm customer had gone up.

Preparing to take care of that business and even greater demands for power in the next decade, is the best possible insurance for the utilities against further Government competition. Let no one doubt that if the private utilities fail adequately to service the demands of the future, the agitators will seize upon that failure to demonstrate the necessity for Government ownership.

Once the utility managers stop listening to the gloom spreaders among them and realize that they, too, are confronted with a situation and not theories, and once the President stops listening to the Lilienthals and Tommy Corcorans who surround him, a real settlement of the utility problem will be in sight. But not before.

Brokers Split Over Blame for SEC's Warning

Some Say Exchange Invited Scolding; One Member Is Disciplined.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 24—The inner councils of the New York Stock Exchange were thrown into a furor of controversy today by SEC Chairman Douglas' demand that the exchange drastically revise its internal set-up or face sweeping extension of Federal control.

Much wrath was directed at the SEC chairman's pronouncement, but hard verbal punches also were thrown at the stock exchange itself by some brokers who said the institution had virtually invited the scolding it received by its conduct of its recent negotiations with the SEC.

Some well-informed Wall Streeters said the controversy had ripped open once more the breach in the exchange membership of two years ago, when Charles R. Gay defeated Richard Whitney, backed by the exchange's so-called "old guard" in a bitter contest for the presidency of the institution

No Surrender Seen

There was no indication the exchange's law committee—most powerful inner group—was willing to capitulate to the SEC to reopen the negotiations for improved self-regulation, which broke down after sending of a draft of a letter to the SEC to Washington Monday.

Gay spent the day in conversation with influential members, and emerged from his office, looking fatigued and concerned, only to say:

"It is my hope that within a reasonable time we can issue a considered statement giving the position of the exchange."

One definite development of the day was announcement of a decision of the governing board to discipline a member for actions during the tidal wave of selling last October 19. It was the first disciplinary measure against a member since March, 1936. Spokesmen for the exchange said the matter had been under investigation for some time, however, and the action was not in response to Douglas' statement.

Market Remains Calm.

In the meantime, the market, as far as price fluctuations were concerned, took the rupture between the exchange and the SEC calmly, although prices drifted lower in typical preholiday dullness. The turnover for the day was only 987,240 shares. The price average of 60 representative issues declined 90 cents to $41.70, a new low since June 3, 1935.

A number of leading bankers, however, expressed hope the disagreement between the exchange and the Federal regulatory commission would soon be patched up, but some were doubtful that this could readily be accomplished.

"Such a conflict," one said, "certainly will not hasten the reopening of the capital market to industry, to check the current recession in business."

The exchange's disciplinary action was taken against John J. Phelan, specialist in Nash-Kelvinator. He was prohibited from acting as a specialist on the floor of the exchange for three months. The action grew out of the handling of orders in Nash-Kelvinator stock on October 19, when it opened with a transfer of 25,000 shares at $5 a share, a drop of $5.50 from the previous day's final price. After opening at $5, it recovered to around $10 that day.

On Capitol Hill

Forum on International Affairs Organized to Keep Congressmen Informed.

NEW HOUSE MEMBERS, under the leadership of Representatives Sparkman, of Alabama; Poage, of Texas, and Boren, of Oklahoma, have started back to school.

And their instructor at the first course was Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who spoke Tuesday night at the opening meeting of a forum on international affairs organized under sponsorship of the three members named above.

The Secretary discussed, confidentially, "the general subject of our international relations" for more than an hour, Sparkman said, adding:

"We agreed tentatively to ask the Chinese Ambassador to talk to us next week and then the Japanese Ambassador the following week. The meetings are open only to members of Congress and their guests."

FIRST TO CONGRATULATE Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, on his sixtieth birthday yesterday was a Republican, Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware. Barkley's celebration during the day was confined to his customary direction of Senate activities for the Democrats.

Legislation to remedy what he called "labor abuses" will be asked of the regular session of Congress, convening January 1, by the Civil Liberties Committee, Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, member of the committee, said:

These recommendations probably will be made, Thomas said:

1. A curb on labor espionage among industries engaged in interstate commerce.
2. Regulation of the sale of munitions and tear gas to industrial plants.
3. Additional Federal restrictions aimed at strike breaking.

The committee has held hearings on various types of anti-union practices in industry. The bulk of the testimony concerned espionage, use of munitions in strikes, strike breaking and coercion and intimidation of union members.

SENATOR WILLIAM G. McAdoo (Democrat), of California, offered a bill to pay Federal subsidies to operators of vessels in Atlantic coast-Pacific coast trade . . . "It is high time that our democracy takes a dynamic and positive stand," said Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, in announcing he was drafting a bill to bar citizenship to foreign-born persons who believe in or advocate principles of dictatorship.

SENATOR JAMES DAVIS (Republican), Pennsylvania, introduced a resolution asking the Bituminous Coal Commission to furnish the Senate copy of a commission resol tion which Davis said made serious charges against one of the commissioners."

The Davis resolution also asked information on the number of commission employes not under civil service, data on correspondence between the commission and the General Accounting Office regarding civil service, and "all information denied the consumers counsel with respect to price-fixing of coal."

Davis said off the Senate floor his resolution would make possible a "blanket investigation" of the commission by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

SENATOR JOSH LEE (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said in the Senate that the cotton surplus problem would be solved "if we could get the 450,000,000 Chinese to lengthen their shirt tails half an inch."

A PLAN for immediate payment of war debts was advanced by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, who outlined in a statement an arrangement by which he said, Great Britain and France could deduct from their debts to this country amounts lent the United States during the Revolutionary and Civil wars, and then pay the balance of their World War obligations to this country.

"I take the liberty," he said, "to suggest that this be done at once, preceding any arrangement of trade treaty, or the negotiation of any further loan of money by our Government, or by bankers or financiers in our Government, with our consent."

LIVELY DEBATE over the social security reserve fund developed in the House during consideration of an unrelated bill to make changes in the Federal credit union act.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, warned against use of the growing social security fund for Governmental expenses. He conceded Government securities now were perfectly sound, but said the country would be headed toward "repudiation and the road to chaos" unless the Administration's policy of spending and operating under an unbalanced budget was changed.

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, replied that if the social security law was not tampered with, the interest from Government bonds would go to "the old people, instead of going to banks, trust companies and individual coupon clippers."

SOME SIGNS appeared in the Senate that wounds left by last session's court bill fight might be healing.

Senator Wheeler, of Montana, leader of Democratic opposition to the court bill, appeared in the chamber for the first time since Congress reconvened. Senators Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, and Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, strolled up to him, arm in arm, to shake hands.

Burke fought with Wheeler against the court bill; Guffey campaigned for it after the measure was killed, Guffey started a bitter party controversy by suggesting that Democrats who had not supported it, including Wheeler and Burke, be defeated for re-election.

I. C. C. Truck Rule Is Effective Today

The metropolitan area zones set up by Interstate Commerce Commission under the motor carrier act become effective today for trucks and buses operating between the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

The local area includes Arlington County and Alexandria in Virginia. In Maryland, the zone extends roughly 8 to 10 miles into Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties.

Commercial carriers bound to points outside the area are subject to all provisions of the act, including those governing rates. Within the line, only the act's safety and hours of service provisions apply.

Owners of vehicles to which the law applies must obtain operating permits from the Interstate Commerce Commission and the machines must carry identification plates. The zoning regulations do not apply to private concerns which act as their own trucks.

Court Upholds Paper's Printing Jurors' Names

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Ohio Supreme Court upheld today freedom of the press to publish names of grand jurors and witnesses summoned to appear before grand juries. It refused to review the case in which Walter Morrow, former editor of the Akron Times-Press, had been held in contempt of court for publishing the names.

Groom Dies in Crash.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 24 (U.P.).—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson were to start on a delayed honeymoon today when Robert, 21, remembered he was out of cigarettes. He took the automobile to get them and was killed six blocks away in a railroad crossing collision.

American Woman Has Post in Japan As Chief Mechanic

Policewomen, feminine Senators and even "Madame Secretaries" are not unknown, but Miss Kay Arnold, now stopping in Washington, claims to being the only woman chief mechanic in the world.

Now on vacation from her job in Japan, Miss Arnold supervises the repair shop of the Duimagee Motor Co., of Kobe, one of the largest automobile agencies in the island empire.

Although she described her present American tour as "strictly vacation," Miss Arnold admitted she plans to pick up 14,000 tires and 15,000 spark plugs.

Western Market Farmers Score In Parking Row

Farmers at the Western Market, Twenty-First and K street, won a partial victory in the parking controversy yesterday when Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, after making an inspection tour of the market announced that "head-in" parking would be permitted Saturday, at which time he would inspect it again.

The controversy grew out of the recent police regulation prohibiting 90-degree parking on the K street side of the market.

The Commissioner's order was the result of a request by a group of farmers that he postpone his final decision regarding the type of parking to be enforced, until viewing the market on "a busy day."

Jailed Nuckols Gang Released On Bonds Here

Six Convicted After Gambling Raids Free Pending Appeal.

After a week in the District jail, Carroll Peyton (Nubby) Nuckols and five men convicted with him on gambling charges here were released on bail yesterday, pending the outcome of an appeal. Five of them posted $3,000 each. The sixth, Lawrence F. Pisani, put up $2,000.

The Government yesterday rested its case in another gambling trial—that of Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos, and four of his alleged henchmen—after prosecution testimony had withstood repeated assaults by defense attorneys, who claimed that raiding warrants were illegal.

Warrants Challenged.

Legality of warrants also was the basis for the Nuckols appeal. Defense Attorneys Harry T. Whelan, W. B. O'Connell and W. A. Gallagher said the warrants were based on the espionage act, a Federal statute, while they should have been based on the District code. Both the prosecuting attorney, Samuel F. Beach, and Justice Jesse C. Adkins, disagreed with this theory, although the judge admitted there was a substantial question of law, and allowed the bail with the provision that it would be revoked if the appeal was not in the United States Court of Appeals by January 17.

In addition to Nuckols and Pisani, the men released were: Moe Morganstein, Robert H. Murray, Anthony T. Costello, Harry C. Adams and George W. Godfrey. They were convicted of running a gaming establishment in the 1200 block of Fourteenth street northwest, the raid on which last March was the first of 65 such forays. They have not been sentenced.

Policeman Made Bets.

Judge Adkins listened to several hours of technical evidence in the Floratos case yesterday, over-ruling motions to quash the warrant and suppress the evidence. He overruled all such motions and the trial recessed until Monday.

Besides Floratos, those standing trial as the result of a raid in the 900 block of Ninth street northwest last February are Vincent A. Marino, Bernard Newyahr, John A. Clements and Bennie B. Traub.

A rookie policeman, Alton S. Bradford, testified he gained entrance and made several race bets. When the raid occurred the place was deserted.

Woman Gets 7 Yrs. On Vice Charges

Camden, N. J., Nov. 24.(AP)—Judge John Boyd Avis in U. S. District Court today sentenced Mrs. Agnes Stein, 43, of Atlantic City to seven years in Federal penitentiary on vice charges.

She was given four years for violating the Mann act by bringing her adopted daughter Peggy from Philadelphia to Atlantic City for immoral purposes.

The three year sentence resulted from a guilty plea to additional charges of Mann Act violations. She also was ordered to pay $1,000 fine.

Cummings Chagrined By Rand's Acquittal

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings expressed disappointment yesterday at outcome of a New Haven (Conn.) trial last week which resulted in acquittal of James H. Rand, jr., of the Remington-Rand Co., and Pearl L. Bergoff.

"The Remington-Rand case was supposed to be a test of the Byrnes act," Cummings told a press conference, "but apparently nothing was tested except the temper of the judge."

Missing Police Chief Sought in Seven States

Angola, N. Y. Nov. 24. (AP)—Police today pressed a seven-state search for police chief Elmore F. White, of the town of Evans, reported missing since Sunday. Trooper D. H. Chamberlain said the missing chief's official car was found parked in nearby Silver Creek, N. Y., early today.

Britain Is Reported Ready to Pay War Debt on New Terms

London (Thursday), Nov. 25 (U.P.). The Daily Express said today that Britain will repay her war debt to the United States under new terms revising the original 1922 debt settlement plan.

A debt conference will be held soon after the proposed Anglo-American pact is signed, according to the paper.

"Negotiations on the terms of the trade pact are now practically complete," the paper said. "The debt conference will be only a formality."

Husband Sues Ex-Star.

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP).—Virginia Lee Corbin Krol, 26, juvenile screen star of 15 years ago, was sued for divorce today for the second time since 1936 by Theodore Krol, Chicago broker, who charged cruelty and asked custody of their two children.

Parole Is Denied Slayer in Holdup

Baltimore, Nov. 24 (AP).—Parole Commissioner J. Cookman Boyd termed a Prince Georges County holdup slaying six years ago as "as rotten a mess as it is possible to find" today, in denying parole to one of two men convicted of the crime.

The prisoner, seeking freedom from a 13-year sentence, was James Zalenski, alias Jimmy Buns, of Baltimore.

Zalenski's plea for freedom was one of ten refused by the parole commissioner at hearings today. Nine other prisoners were recommended to the Governor for parole. They were:

Harrison Black, colored, Carroll County; Harry Crissy, Talbot; Edward Garner, colored, Calvert; John Gordy, Somerset; John McLaughlin, Frank Mayhew, Jules Moral, and Mervin Unklesbee, Calvert County, and James Savoy, Prince Georges.

Pastor Found Guilty in Killing With Hammer

By the Associated Press.

Pittsfield, Ill., Nov. 24.—The Rev. C. E. Newton was convicted today of slaying his former Sunday school teacher and the jury fixed his punishment at life imprisonment.

The 51-year-old Missouri country preacher had pleaded he was the victim of circumstances in the brutal hammer-slaying last July of Mrs. Dennis Kelly, 45-year-old mother, of Paris, Mo.

A motion for a new trial was filed a few hours after the jury returned the verdict.

Merrill Johnston, youthful State's attorney, who read to the jury Newton's purported "confession" to slaying Mrs. Kelly "with something, I think a hammer," the night of last July 12, said: "I'm well satisfied with the decision."

Myra Hanan, 37-year-old foster daughter of the preacher, and whom he implicated in the murder through testimony in his own defense, testified Newton gave her an envelope of money last July 13, said it had belonged to Mrs. Kelly and asked her to tell questioners he had not left his home the previous night.

The minister admitted helping Mrs. Kelly flee from her husband, a rural mail carrier, but declared she was slain after he was abducted and beaten on a lonely road by captors

Chautemps Is Backed On French Pay Raises

Paris, Nov. 24 (AP).—Premier Camille Chautemps ended a threat to the People's Front coalition today by winning a majority agreement to a compromise plan for pay raises to government employes.

Only the Communists dissented from the support given by most leftist Deputies to the arrangement to earmark 1,745,000,000 francs (about $58,170,000) for salary increases. Political observers said the agreement assured Chautemps a comfortable majority, even without Communist support.

of Gallinger's pediatrics ward, said outside organizations had contributed fruits, nuts, candies and other gifts to cheer the youngsters.

Thanksgiving cheer also will be provided for hundreds of underprivileged persons through activities of the churches and welfare organizations in distributing baskets of food and serving special dinners.

Football Game Slated.

Football enthusiasts will be provided with a chance to cheer at Catholic University's homecoming football game with the University of South Carolina. Miss Natalie Ryan, of Detroit, a 21-year-old graduate drama school student, who was chosen Miss Catholic University, will present a bouquet to Carolina's queen in a brief ceremony on the field.

The Marine Band will provide a half-hour program of music preceding the service in Washington Cathedral. The crucifer of the cathedral and church and Masonic dignitaries will lead a colorful procession at the start of the service.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will deliver the sermon. Others taking part in the program will include Walter L. Fowler, grand marshal of the grand lodge of the District of Columbia; Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, director general of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission; the Rev. Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House, and Masonic Grand Master Paul D. Cromelin.

Famous Bible to Be Used.

The Bible, which will rest on the Lectern during the service, will be the identical one on which Washington was obligated as a Master Mason in 1753. It will be brought in its special glass case direct from Fredericksburg (Va.), Lodge No. 4, to the Cathedral by H. R. Ellis, W. W. Shelton and Edward H. Cann, officers of that lodge.

Special seating arrangements have been made for members of the Cabinet in the fore part of the Nave; the Diplomatic Corps and guests in the South Transept; Masonic officials and guests in the North Transept. Members of Congress, officers of the Grand Lodge and the clergy will be seated in the choir.

Luncheon will be served to invited guests in the St. Patrick's Church rectory following the Pan-American mass. The Rev. Lawrence J. Kelly, of St. Aloysius Church, will assist the apostolic delegate at the mass. Other officers of the mass will be the Rev. Andrew S. Keltus, of Marist Seminary, and Father John Bradus, of the Victorian Seminary; the Rev. Henry F. Greevenstein, of St. Cyprians Church, and the Rev. J. J. Clark, of St. Theresa's Church.

Father Walsh to Preach.

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, will preach, and the Rev. Francis J. Kelly, pastor of St. Patrick's, will be master of ceremonies.

The 11 Protestant churches in Georgetown will hold their annual union for Thanksgiving service at 10:30 a. m. in Christ Episcopal Church, Thirty-first and O streets northwest.

These churches besides Christ Episcopal, are St. John's Episcopal, Georgetown Presbyterian, Grace Episcopal, Georgetown Lutheran, Congress Street Methodist Protestant, Calvary M. E. South, Dumbarton Avenue M. E., West Washington Baptist, Mount Tabor Protestant and Peck Memorial Chapel.

The thirteenth union service of six churches on Capitol Hill will be held in the Epworth Methodist Episcopal Cnurch South at 10:30 a. m. The Rev. Harold Mumper, minister of the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, will deliver the sermon.

Another Union Service.

Another union Thanksgiving service will be held at 11 a. m. at the National City Christian Church. Dr. Raphael H. Miller will preside. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson of the First Congregational Church will deliver the sermon.

Frank Evans, former Federal Farm Board member and now president of the Eastern States Mission, ecclesiastical unit of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon), will speak before the union Thanksgiving service at 11 a. m. at the National Universalist Church. His subject is "The Will to Believe." This service will be participated in by seven churches.

At the Chapel of the Redeemer in Glen Echo there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. with sermon by the Rev. A. M. Perkins.

Religious service in the Central Mission Union chapel will precede the Thanksgiving dinner, which will be served to as many needy men as apply. Baskets will be distributed by the Mission throughout the day to impoverished families.

Virginian Free on Bond In Arms Shipping Plot

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 24 (AP)—Bjarne Olsen, of near Montvale, was free tonight under bond of $9,500 on a charge of conspiracy to smuggle arms and ammunition to Honduras.

Olsen was one of several named in an indictment recently returned at Mobile, Ala., and he is scheduled to appear there this month for trial.

isting business taxes "before Christmas."

Prominent among those who are advising action now is Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, who yesterday scoffed at claims that special session revision would be either "too hasty" or ill-considered.

Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, admitted yesterday he would like to see the undivided profits tax modified this session "if possible." Harrison declined to disclose the results of recent talks with leaders of the House Ways and Means Committee, but their stand for action next session last night was reliably reported "unchanged."

In conference with Harirson yesterday was Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and one of the first Administration officials to come out for modification of the undivided profits tax and the capital gains levy, as an aid to lagging business.

Urges White House Statement.

Kennedy is said to favor issuance of an Admnistration statement reflecting the views of White House, Treasury and Congressional leaders, indorsing modifying changes already approve by the House tax sub-committee, and assuring action by Congress early next session. He was said to feel this would have a stimulating effect upon business confidence generally.

Kennedy called at the Capitol at Harrison's invitation, as the Finance Committee chairman continued a round of conferences on tax proposals. Harrison declined comment on the Kennedy suggestion, but Byrnes said a statement of intentions to modify business taxes "wouldn't do any good."

The South Carolinian said he "is telling everyone" who asked his opinion that the undivided profits tax and the capital gains levy ought to be modified or repealed immediately.

"There isn't anything sane about the idea that we can't legislate this session on two tax schedules," said Byrnes.

"With the aid of their experts and the data they have collected, the House sub-committee ought to be able to draft a bill in 12 hours," he said. "I could do it myself in that time. It shouldn't take another 12 hours for the House to pass the bill, and within 48 hours the Senate could consider it. There just isn't anything to this talk that Congress hasn't time to enact those two schedules."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Montana, echoed Byrnes' sentiments, and added:

"I feel that Congress wants the Administration to take the lead in laying down this session a policy for the stimulation of private business, and tax modification should be the first step."

But Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, reiterated that special session time is too short to enact a well considered tax bill.

"It is ridiculous to think that a bill could be passed by the House, considered by the Senate Finance Committee and passed in the Senate by Christmas," Barkley said. "I am just as anxious as anyone for tax revision, but I don't want to botch the job in a hurry. We can pass a bill before the corporations have to report their income tax on March 15."

"Rider" Is Proposed.

Neither Harrison nor Byrnes is in favor of the Senate forcing the issue by writing a tax modification rider into revenue legislation pending in the Senate. But three Senators—Bulkley, of Ohio, and Adams, of Colorado (Democrats), and Bridges, of New Hampshire (Republican)—have proposed the "rider" method if the House fails to act first.

Harrison thinks a bill should first be reported by the Ways and Means Committee, and passed by the House. He now favors quick revision, and promised swift action by the Finance Committee if such a measure reaches the Senate this session.

The President meantime was reported to be backing Chairman Fred Vinson of the House tax subcommittee in his plan to include modification of both levies in a bill generally revising the tax laws, in time for action early next session. Vinson believes more would be lost than gained through "hasty" action.

"Nuisance" Taxes Studied.

Whether a strong bi-partisan bloc in the Senate would attempt a tax "rider" coup immediately after Senate action on the farm bill will depend on the course finally decided on by the House sub-committee.

Yesterday the House group laid aside for the moment preliminary drafts of undivided profits and capital gains tax modifications, and proceeded to study so-called "nuisance" taxes for possible changes.

Proposed removal or revision of nuisance taxes on movie tickets, tooth paste, chewing gum, perfumes, cosmetics, toilet soaps, furs, sporting goods, matches, cameras and brewers' wort, will be studied by the sub-committee.

G-Men's Help Asked in Death Of Labor Chief

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Nov. 24.—Gov. Elmer Benson appealed yesterday for the aid of Federal agents in the investigation of the slaying of Union Chief Patrick Corcoran, his action coinciding with another labor leader's report of fresh death threats.

The Governor, pointing to charges that "imported gangsters" assassinated the powerful figure in American Federation of Labor circles a week ago, asked the intervention of Department of Justice operatives.

C. I. O. Man Threatened.

"City and State police," he stated, "thus far have failed to apprehend the criminals."

William Mauseth, Committee for Industrial Organization leader, who demanded a grand jury investigation of "gangsterism and racketeering in the Minneapolis labor movement," said five anonymous telephone calls warning him to leave town "or else" came to his home within 20 minutes this morning. A police squad car guarded his home.

In Washington, Attorney General Cummings sent the Governor's request for help to the criminal division.

Eddie and Al Firotti, former Chicago labor organizers, and the only persons held in connection with the case, won their freedom on a writ of habeas corpus. They admitted attacking the labor leader four days before his death, but denied any connection with the slaying.

Pistol Is Tested.

County Coroner Gilbert Seashore announced he would conduct an inquest, delayed because he feared it might handicap police activity, early next week.

Mauseth was a principal in the exchange of charges during the past week between C. I. O. and A. F. L. leaders. Each claims the other group imported "sluggers" to aid unionization drives.

Police ballistic experts began tests on a .38-caliber pistol turned over to them by a high school boy who said he found it in the weeds near a freight terminal in northeast Minneapolis. A .38-caliber bullet killed Corcoran.

Fake Interne Gets Expectant Mother To Pay Him $7.50

Aroused First Precinct policemen last night were looking for a man who mulcted an expectant mother of $7.50, all the money she had, after he had made her submit to a "medical" examination.

Dressed in the white uniform of an interne, the man called at the woman's apartment in the 200 block of Indiana avenue northwest and announced that he had been sent by a nearby clinic to examine her.

The examination complete, the "interne" asked for a $1.80 fee. When the woman said that she didn't have the exact sum, he agreed to take a $5 bill and to send her the change, along with some medicine that he said she needed.

The woman waited vainly for the change and medicine and then went to the clinic, which denied all knowledge of the interne. She later learned that, along with the $5, the man had stolen $2.50 from her purse. The woman's expected child will be her seventh.

WPA Rolls Mounting From September Basis

By the Associated Press.

Employment on WPA projects throughout the United States increased 36,613 between September 25 and November 6, it was learned yesterday.

WPA rolls reached the low point for 1937 on September 25, with 1,452,874 persons employed. Since then employment has increased, with 1,477,291 listed for October 30, and 1,488,487 employed on November 6.

G-Men Seize Alabama Check Fugitive in Texas

John W. Tyson, 48, sought by relatives so that his signature might be obtained in connection with an inheritance for his son, was arrested Tuesday near Joinerville, Texas, by Department of Justice agents who accused him of putting his signature on a number of spurious checks.

Tyson allegedly obtained indorsements from a number of friends in Alabama on bad checks and in January, 1936 was indicted by a Federal grand jury.

Agrees With Views of President

a result of the discussions which Mr. Roosevelt has had with utility executives in recent days." He said he hoped to co-operate in anything further that the President may undertake to bring about a better understanding between the Government and the utilities and to revive utility construction.

Carlisle's announcement and his friendly attitude toward the President caused surprise in New York, because his companies have been threatened with Government competition in the power development of the St. Lawrence River and have been retrenching recently.

Here his statements were regarded as of great significance in indicating a cessation of warfare between the Administration and the major part of the utility industry over power policy because the Carlisle companies are said to constitute the world's greatest electric generating system from the viewpoint of power production.

Carlisle did not indicate whether he and the President exchanged any commitments. But the readiness with which he spoke of advancing the construction plans for his companies inspired speculation that Mr. Roosevelt might have given him to understand that the St. Lawrence project had been abandoned or modified so far as the Federal Government was concerned.

In this connection, it was recalled that in his press conference Tuesday describing his discussions with Wendell Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, the President classified the St. Lawrence project as remote, adding that before anything could be done in that direction a treaty would have to be concluded with Canada. Such a treaty was negotiated several years ago, but the Senate refused to ratify it. Since then negotiations with Canada have been reopened.

Mr. Roosevelt on Tuesday described the St. Lawrence project as remote when he was asked whether that project was included in figures he had given showing the extent of Government competition under existing and projected hydroelectric undertakings. He said the St. Lawrence project was not included, because it was remote.

Meanwhile, Willkie, back in New York, asserted that as a compromise in order to bring reconciliation between the Administration and private utilities," he was willing to accept the "prudent investment" theory of valuation as a rate-making basis for his properties on all new construction and expansion.

"I would recommend," he asserted "that utilities should be valued as of this date by the rules laid down by the Supreme Court, which have been in effect for 40 years, and that the prudent investment theory should be adopted hereafter."

The prudent investment theory of valuation for rate-making purposes was suggested to the utilities by the President several weeks ago in a press conference. Willkie asserted he did not believe th prudnt investment method was as satisfactory from the consumers' viewpoint as the methods prescribed in Supreme Court decisions.

"However, the utilities could constitute such a great force for the stimulation of recovery, and their satisfactory relationship with the Federal Government is so indispensable to their own well-being," he asserted, "that I would recommend the modification in the valuation of utilities in the hope that it would constitute the basis for an amicable adjustment."

Carlisle, who talked with the President in company with Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, on leave as chairman of the Federal Power Co., eagerly told newspapermen of his discussion and intentions. He said one reason advanced by the President for going ahead immediately with an expansion program was the Federal Government's program for stimulating housing construction.

Incidentally, the Administration's plan for encouraging a huge housing construction program by private enterprise has been completed, and the President's message will go to Congress probably Friday.

Carlisle said the program his companies would undertake included expansion of both generating and distributing facilities. For instance, he said the Niagara Hudson would go ahead with construction of a $12,000,000 generating plant at Oswego, N. Y. This unit, he said, will give the company an additional 100,000 horsepower. He said the distribution facilities could be expanded with profit throughout the entire territory of his companies.

"Our load in the last two years has grown faster than that of any other company," he asserted. "We are going ahead on the assumption that business is going to hold the increase."

He said he had discussed with the President the possibilities of financing the expansion program. It was in this respect that the President's discussions with utility executives was important. He thought they had improved the situation very much and then added that "fears of Government competition have been very much lessened as a result of these talks."

Col. Stowell Dies In Coco Solo, C. Z.

Lieut. Col. George A. Stowell, 48, United States Marine Corps, died yesterday at the naval submarine base, Coco Solo, Canal Zone.

A native of Portland, Oreg., he was appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps in 1913, and the following year was sent to Vera Cruz, Mexico.

Col. Stowell, who was a graduate of the field officers' course, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., was with the expeditionary forces in Haiti and Santo Domingo.

During the World War he served in France with the Sixth Marine Regiment, participating in engagements at Chateau Thiery and in the Argonne forest. Col. Stowell also took part in the march to the Rhine and the occupation of the Coblenz bridgehead.

Cited by Gen. Pershing for gallantry in action at Blanc Mont, Col. Stowell was a holder of the Mexican Service Medal, Haitian Campaign Medal, Dominican Campaign Medal, Marine Corps Expeditionary Medal, Victory Medal with four battle clasps, Silver Star Medal and the French Croix de Guerre.

He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Constance J. Gamborg-Anderson.

U. S. Apple Buying Is Put at 775 Cars

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 24.—Approximately 465,000 bushels of apples have been purchased by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, it was learned today from R. W. Tyson, purchasing agent in charge of the regional office in this city.

Final reports have not been compiled, Tyson said, and will be released from Washington when complete, but it is indicated that purchases in the four States, which were distributed by the Government to needy families in various sections of the country, amounted to an aggregate of 775 carloads.

This is not a seasonal gift, for every free hour of every day, Winter and Summer, can be devoted to the train. You can be station-master, train dispatcher, engineer, and conductor. It is your railroad . . . to you, finer, faster, better than any other railroad in the world. You can know every piece of track by heart . . . know when to slow her down and when to "let her roll." But be sure that only the best materials are in your railroad. Burleson Dies; Stormy Petrel In War Cabinet

McAdoo, Farley Pay Honor to Postmaster General Under Wilson.

Albert Sidney Burleson, 74, World War Postmaster General and a Representative in Congress for eight terms, died yesterday at his home in Austin. He was the first Texan to serve in the Cabinet of a President.

Death of Mr. Burleson revived memories of turbulent war days, for he was always a stormy figure in President Wilson's Cabinet. Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, Secretary of the Treasury under President Wilson, said yesterday regarding his former colleague:

"President Wilson greatly valued Burleson's advice on many important matters, which had to be dealt with in the epochal Wilson Administration.

Farley Joins Eulogy.

"Burleson's administration of the Postoffice Department was characterized by economy and efficiency. He was the first Postmaster General up to his time who turned into the Treasury substantial surpluses from the operations of the Postoffice Department."

Postmaster General Farley ordered flags on all postoffice buildings to be flown at half-staff until after the former Postmaster General's funeral. Farley, who was a friend of Burleson in later years, said that in his death "the country loses an outstanding citizen."

"He was one of the ablest Postmasters General this country has had," declared the man who now holds that office.

Built Parcel Post.

Mr. Burleson, while Postmaster General, was the subject of many bitter attacks. These were caused by his increase of the postage rate on newspapers and magazines and his refusal to recognize striking postal employes in West Virginia.

He shunned publicity and never emphasized his building up of the parcel post service until it became one of the greatest transportation agencies in the world. He inaugurated space rates instead of weight rates. The parcel post service was only three months old when he received it.

Mr. Burelson also sought to have the principles of civil service applied to all classes of postmasters. He established a dependable air mail service and gave a great impetus to commercial aviation.

Ruled Wire Services.

Throughout the United States' participation in the World War the Postal Department performed an enormous amount of work in connection with conservation of food and fuel, distribution of industrial forces, sale of bonds and war savings and thirft stamps, execution of the espoinage and trading with the enemy acts, listing aliens and alien property and other services connected with nearly every department of the Government.

Mr. Burleson also directed the telephone and telegraph services under Government control in the war. Labor attacked him for refusing increased wage demands of telegraph and telephone employes. Postal employes complained they were overworked and the department was undermanned.

Nevertheless, after the conflict, Mr. Burleson returned the communications lines to their owners in better condition than they were when he took over control. By refusing employes' demands, he showed a profit on operation of those utilities, in contrast to other industries taken over by the Government.

Fought Prohibition.

Mr. Burleson also became famous for his opposition to the prohibition amendment. He said pohibition invaded the constitutional rights of American citizens and was forced on the United States through "war hysteria."

Mr. Burleson was born in San Marcos, Tex., son of the late Edward Burleson, jr., a major in the Confederate Army in the Civil War. He was educated at Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, Baylor University and the University of Texas and was admitted to the bar in 1884.

Entering public life as the assistant city attorney of Austin in 1885, Mr. Burleson became district attorney and later served in the Fifty-sixth, Fifty-seventh, Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth, Sixtieth, Sixty-first, Sixty-second and Sixty-third Congresses.

He was appointed Postmaster General March 4, 1913, and reappointed in 1918. In his later years, Mr. Burleson lived in Austin and devoted most of his time to gardening. Although wealthy in 1926, oil which was found that year on arid land he owned in west Texas made him a very rich man.

Besides his wife, three daughters, Mrs. E. D. W. Negley, Mrs. Charles Grimes and Mrs. Bryant Smith, two sisters and six grandchildren survive.

Edward Walsh Named Head of Alfalfa Club

Gene Buck Is Elected Vice President; New Members Are Chosen.

Election of Edward J. Walsh, Washington businessman, as president of the Alfalfa Club, a group of more than 100 public officials and business and profesional men, was announced yesterday. The annual meeting of the club was held Tuesday at the home of Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, 3825 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Other officers elected for the ensuing year were Gene Buck, vice president; Joseph H. Himes, second vice president, and Charles P. Light, secretary-treasurer.

The president appointed Thomas W. Brahany chairman of the committee on entertainment; William Payne Meredith, sergeant at arms, and George H. O'Connor, water boy.

Election to membership of the following was announced: Dr. John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va.; Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram; Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.; Dr. William McClellan; Representative Sam Rayburn, of Tennesse; William Ridgeway Rodenberg, Merle Thorpe, Dr. James F. Mitchell and Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York.

The annual frolic of the club, at which members are initiated, usually is held in January. Song and humor feature the frolic program.

U. S. Political Link Favored by Filipinos

Manila, Nov. 24 (AP).—A Filipino laborers' organization—the National Civic Union—today announced it favored continued political partnership between the United States and the Philippines.

A spokesman announced the stand in response to Commonwealth President Manuel L. Quezon's request for plain speaking concerning his plea for complete separation from American Government in 1938 or 1939, instead of in 1946 under the independence grant.

Realty Experts Named to Scan Fidelity Assets

Three to Determine if 85 Per Cent Sale Is Fair Market Price.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Court, yesterday appointed J. Dallas Grady, Arthur C. Houghton and Martin R. West as expert appraisers to go over the real estate assets of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association and determine whether sale of the association's assets for 85 per cent of the share liability "is a fair and equitable market price."

Appointment of the appraisers was suggested by Justice O'Donoghue when a plan, by which the assets of the association were to be taken over by the newly-formed First Federal Savings & Loan Association, was brought before him for approval.

Because of the thousands of depositors in the association with $4,400,000 involved, and 800 pieces of real estate to be considered, Justice O'Donoghue directed the appointment of the appraisers.

The order appointing the appraisers, all of whom are real estate operators, made available to them data in the office of James H. Nolan, receiver for the Fidelity, and the results of numerous surveys by Federal bureaus.

The First Federal proposed to take over the assets of the Fidelity and pay an 85 per cent dividend now. It was hoped the proposition could be approved in time to enable the depositors, of whom there are 18,000, to get their payments by Christmas. That hope is now forlorn, since the work of evaluating the 800 properties will consume considerable time.

Quezon Reported Better.

Huge Soviet Air Transport in First Flight

Sold to Soviet Russia, the Martin Ocean Transport (so named) flew for the first time Wednesday at Middle River, near Baltimore, on a test flight in which an altitude of 100 feet was maximum. About two weeks' further testing remain before delivery. Features: 285 per cent increase in long-range payload transport efficiency over that of the famed China Clipper; 157-foot wing-spread, nonstop range of 3,500 miles; accommodations: daytime, 46; night time, 26; crew of 10, noise level claimed lower than that of a Pullman, draftless ventilation air-conditioned at 65 to 70 degrees, top speed of 200 miles an hour and gross weight of 63,000 pounds.

Cross-Eyed Expert Joins AAFRB to Aid Foes of Dizzy Fish

Round fish bowls may not make their occupants dizzy but they do make Fred Orsinger, director of the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium, crosseyed, he confided yesterday.

And with that remark he joined a movement to eliminate globular bowls sponsored by the association for the Abolition of Round Fish Bowls, of Wellesley, Mass. He found the condition of fish in such surroundings distressing.

"Psychologists," he said, "have pointed out that the round bowls distort a small, harmless fish into a ferocious denizen of the deep, producing a bad effect on children."

Globular bowls, he explained, also are tough on people who wish to see both sides of a fish and don't have all day to spend at the job. Of course, Orsinger admitted, one might pick up the bowl.

"But just try it," he exclaimed. "The bowl turns and the fish stands still!"

Killings in Palestine Unrest Placed at 410

London, Nov. 24 (AP).—William Ormsby-Gore, colonial secretary, told the House of Commons today there had been 410 slayings in strife-shaken Palestine between January 1, 1936, and October 31, 1937. In the same period, the colonial secretary said, there were 113 convictions and 7 death sentences, of which six were commuted.

In Jerusalem the first of the Holy Land's new courts martial dealt a warning to terrorists today when it sentenced Sheik Farhan Saadi to be hanged for possessing firearms and ammunition.

Released Convict Forgets to Have Leg Iron Removed

Will Norman, 33, colored, of Washington, was in such a hurry to begin living again as a free man that he forgot to have a shackle removed from his leg before leaving a Linden (Va.) prison camp.

At Alexandria he asked employes at a garage to file it off. They called police.

The camp confirmed Norman's story that he had been discharged after serving two years on a charge of housebreaking. And the shackel was removed.

Franchise for Women Proposed by Cardenas

Mexico City, Nov. 24 (AP).—President Cardenas has proposed a constitutional amendment to permit women to vote.

The President also is sponsoring legislation to give public employes all benefits generally enjoyed by labor under Mexican laws, except the right to strike. Difficulties between government and its workers would be settled by compulsory arbitration.

Store Teams Compete In Swimming Contest

More than 200 men and women Tuesday took part in a swimming meet at the Ambassador Hotel, representing the "blue and "white" teamso of the Hecht Co. The meet was directed by Louis Ettelson, store promotion manager.

Back hand, free style, relay and baloon races were staged, as well as diving demonstrations. Competition in the blue and white contests included sales records as well as athletic prowess.

"THANKS A MILLION" FOR ANOTHER MILLION IN 1937!

Again in 1937, for the second consecutive year, motorists will have purchased more than one million Chevrolets; and they are now giving an even greater measure of friendship and favor to Chevrolet for 1938.

Again this year, at Thanksgiving time, we of Chevrolet wish to express our deep and sincere appreciation for the loyal friendship of motor car buyers in 1937 and, in fact, throughout more than a quarter-century.

You who motor have always been exceedingly generous in your response to Chevrolet products, and this year you have been particularly generous, as is clearly indicated by the following facts:

You have displayed such keen and enthusiastic favor for Chevrolet that this is the second consecutive year in which you will have purchased more than one million new Chevrolets!

You have shown the same eager liking for Chevrolet trucks and commercial cars, with the result that they have become known as the thrift-carriers for the nation!

You have paid Chevrolet dealers an overwhelming tribute of confidence by purchasing more than 1,750,000 used cars from the only men who sell used cars bearing the famous Guaranteed OK tag!

And now you are giving still further evidence of your friendship by awarding the new Chevrolet for 1938 the most enthusiastic endorsement any new Chevrolet has ever received!

Thank you for your friendship . . . "thanks a million" for another million in 1937 . . . and you may rest assured that Chevrolet will also express its appreciation in deeds by continuing to serve you faithfully and by continuing to build the kind of car you'll always prefer to own.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

Indignation Dept.

Understandably, hundreds of students in local night law schools are in "consternation" (as they call it) over Agriculture's "Class A" ruling for its legal division recruitments; the school officials are "apprehensive," and thousands of Government employes, who look to the night law schools as offering equipment for advancement in the service, view the policy as one which literally pulls the rungs from the success ladder they hope to climb.

The matter has caused genuine alarm. (Letters in our mail box showed it.) But to this minute neither side to the controversy had taken the matter in a firm grip, looked it in the face and then decided what could very easily be done about it. And a solution would seem very simple.

First, look at the situation.

The Agriculture Department solicitor, Mastin G. White, some two weeks ago, admitted that there has been a policy, of two years' standing, which discourages, if not forbids, the employment on the solicitor's staff of attorneys who don't own a sheepskin from a Class A law college. A Class A law college—under this interpretation, at least—is a law college which is recognized by the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools.

This lets out—from employment in Agriculture's legal division—those students who have worked by day and studied by night. Now consider the reasons for this and the rebuttals of the reasons:

The department spokesman, specifically Solicitor White, says the idea is to bring the best available men into the service. The opponents, specifically students of the prescribed schools, and at least two officials of as many schools, say, in effect that the explanation is so much bunk. The real reason, they say, is a fear that the night law schools will unload its product on a city already full of attorneys, and they claim that behind the policy is the Washington Bar.

Ironically, they further allege that more than half of the policy's proponents are "two-year men" who now are in and don't want to see others come in that way.

Then they turn to the allaying of fears: The high school students, 95 per cent of them, have no thought of practicing law in Washington, nor anywhere else. They "take law" simply to advantage themselves in the service, where the study of law is encouraged by administrative officials, particularly in the Justice Department.

They fear that the policy may spread from Agriculture to other departments. And to even this have come rebuttals. No one, it is said, objects to their taking law at night; it doesn't mean that they cannot be employed in Agriculture; it simply means that they can't work, as lawyers, in Agriculture's legal division.

To this comes the reply: "But, all other aspects aside, wasn't it a pretty arbitrary ruling?"

And the melody lingers on. And will linger on just so long as nobody does anything but stand back two paces and argue. Wouldn't it be a very simple matter to call District 6350 and ask someone in Secretary Wallace's office if the Secretary couldn't be seen, at his own convenience and pleasure? The chances of his granting such audience are 99 to 1. Then couldn't the entire facts of the case be laid before him in a cool and conciliatory manner. And who is willing to bet that complete and perfectly satisfactory adjustment would not be made within half an hour?

Opinion.

But before leaving the subject, here is how one student feels, his expression being in a letter to us: "There are current attempts being made by certain factions here to 'raise the standards' of law education in the District.

"These changes, if put into effect, will place such restrictions on the study of law here as to make the continued existence of night law schools dubious, to say the least. These restrictions directly affect Government employes who have found that a higher education means a better job. It is of prime importance that these educational facilities be retained, for what better way have we of attaining a better and more efficient civil service than through higher education?

"A number of departments, taking cognizance of this, have made it mandatory for employes in some divisions to have a law education. Other departments favor the study of law by their employes, as it is conducive to more interest and better work by the employe. We should commend those who pursue the study of law and not handicap them."

Nine employes will be retired from the Government Printing Office at the end of this month. They are: Annie Ayres, 1107 C street northeast, bindery operative, 40 years' service; William B. Bagnam, 1423 Hemlock street northwest, assistant chief pipefitter, 34 years; William A. Creveling, 1226 Kennedy street northwest, bindery operative, 22 years; George P. Gladden, 1304 C street southeast, unskilled laborer, 26 years; Thomas A. Holle, 1701 Trinidad avenue northeast, monotype machinists helper, 37 years; William J. McGarvey, 819 Massachusetts avenue northeast, bookbinder, 22 years; George E. Smouse, 653 East Capitol street, linotype machinist, 30 years; Charles W. Warner, 624 Maryland avenue northeast, linotype machinist, 18 years, and John Murry Wilson, 419 Decatur street northwest compositor, 15 years.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

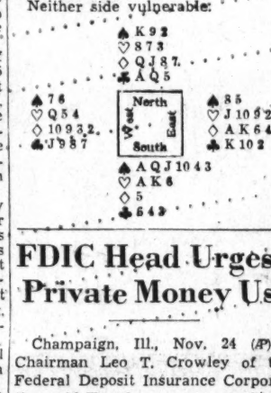
Spot-Cards.

Most experienced players consider the value of spot-cards in deciding close points of bidding. Give a player a hand with a few high cards and seven or eight deuces, treys and four-spots, and he will lean to the conservative side whenever in doubt. But change those low cards to sevens, eights, and nines and he will bid a little more optimistically. The reason is that possession of these intermediate cards may give declarer a play for his contract which could not have been predicted in the bidding.

In today's hand note the value of North's diamond spot-cards.

North, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 N.T	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the ten of diamonds. Dummy played the Jack, and East won with the King. South won the heart return, and proceeded to make use of dummy's valuable eight and seven of diamonds.

South cashed the Ace of spades and led to dummy's nine, exhausting trumps, and simultaneously gaining entry to dummy. The Queen of diamonds was next led. East realized that the opening lead had marked the Ace in his hand and saw no reason to withhold it. When East's Ace appeared, South trumped. Dummy was now entered with the King of spades, and the eight of diamonds was returned. On this South discarded his losing heart. West won with the nine of diamonds, but now dummy's seven was established for the discard of a losing club. South, therefore, lost only one club and two diamonds.

Note that if South had not made use of dummy's diamonds he would have lost two clubs and one trick in each red suit.

FDIC Head Urges Private Money Use

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 24 (AP).—Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation said Tuesday movement of private capital into banks was "long past due" and cited the increased use of such capital as one of eight steps needed for the "permanent strengthening of our banking system."

In an address prepared for the third annual conference of banking at the University of Illinois, Crowley said return of private local capital into the American banking system would not only "build an adequate ratio" but would also replace loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

RFC aid was necessary and welcome in a time of emergency, he said, but "continuous Government participation in ownership of the country's banks is quite inconsistent with the theory and practice of private capitalism."

Ex-Bishop Wills Fund To Spread Communism

Galion, Ohio, Nov. 24 (U.P.).—The Rev. William Montgomery Brown, voted a heretic and expelled 12 years ago from the Episcopal Church, in which he was a bishop, provided in his will for establishment of a Communist foundation with the residue of his estate after payment of certain bequests. Friends said the former bishop was worth at least $500,000.

Thanksgiving Reflections.

Thanksgiving has become an occasion for reflective appraisal of the events of the preceding year as well as a day for the expression of gratitude to Deity. It is especially appropriate that this peculiarly American holiday should inspire citizens to look backward to past mistakes as well as achievements, and forward to new problems. For this kind of self-analysis is one of the first prerequisites of progress.

If general conditions in this country are contrasted with those prevailing in some other parts of the world, the American people can count themselves fortunate, indeed. Blood is being spilt in a wholesale manner on two continents. Unrest prevails over a considerable part of the globe. Millions of people have lost their liberties and other vast groups are ever haunted by the pressure of poverty. By comparison with these distressing conditions the lot of the average American family is a very happy one.

But there is also ample ground for disappointment over the current business slump, which has left a cloud of gloom over many households on this festive occasion. Once more significant contrasts can be drawn. Economic curves representing the business and industrial activities of the United States have taken a sharp plunge downward. Reports from abroad indicate that the decline has been more pronounced in this country than in the world at large. In 1929 we began slipping into a morass along with the rest of the world. Now there are hopeful indications that no world-wide depression is in prospect.

That very fact is one reason for encouragement. To cope with a national slump should be far easier than to arrest a world-wide depression. Moreover, there are hopeful signs that the Administration intends to grapple with the obstacles which are believed to have blocked the road to recovery. There is needless delay in undertaking such a program, but mere recognition of the need for it is a step in advance.

While these measures are taking shape, the people may find comfort in the fact that many conditions behind the present trend of the indices are favorable. What seems to be needed most is a co-ordination of efforts, a better understanding of goals that can be reached under our present economic system and a willingness to adjust programs to the obvious needs of the hour. The increased attention now being given to a national housing program suggests progress in this direction.

Looking back over the past year, however, there is too much evidence of lost motion; too little evidence of clear purposes resolutely pursued by practical means. Appreciation for what has been achieved should not be permitted to obscure that fact.

Thanksgiving in 1938 will bring a much brighter outlook than that by which the country is now confronted if our national energy can be more effectively turned toward supplying the manifold wants of the people, with less wasted motion resulting from untried methods of approach which, in the long run, may prove to be of little importance.

The SEC Statement.

Although rather sharply challenging in tone, the statement issued by Chairman Douglas of the SEC is, on the whole, an objective and informative analysis of certain problems that the organized exchanges undoubtedly will have to deal with at no distant date. There is nothing in the character of the recommendations to justify suspicions that the SEC is moved by a desire to punish its detractors or defend itself against charges that Federal regulation is largely responsible for the severity of the stock market break.

Obviously Mr. Douglas is putting pressure upon the exchange authorities to induce them to come forward with a program of reorganization that would solve some of the problems brought to public attention by his announcement. But there is no evidence that he will seek more direct administration of the business of the exchanges by the commission, so long as the exchange authorities co-operate in the regulatory program tentatively outlined.

Suggestions for a reduction in the number of exchange members, and for appointment of outsiders at regular salaries to head the exchanges, are certainly not iconoclastic. The presidency of the New York Stock Exchange has come to be recognized as a full-time job. To entrust the duties of the office to an outsider would not prevent self-regulation, since members would still serve as the governing body. And, as the commission says, the public might have greater confidence in the exchanges if their administrative management was taken out of the hands of members.

A reduction in the number of members of the large exchanges may be a logical consequence of a lessened volume of speculative business resulting from regulatory prohibitions. Furthermore, it might greatly facilitate the elimination of abuses to have fewer persons trying to obtain a living from organized speculation. As an alternative, however, it might be desirable to admit banks and investment houses as associate members, letting them pay reduced commissions on transactions effected for their account. In that way a certain amount of business would be attracted to the exchanges which now escapes them, and the surplus memberships might be absorbed.

The data showing that professional floor traders and specialists accelerate the downward trend during periods of declining prices by selling short disproves the argument that short sellers exercise a stabilizing influence on market values.

The commission believes that odd-lot trading should be a stabilizing influence. Records of transactions, it is said, show that odd-lot customers have been buying heavily on balance during the recent decline. But the commission criticizes dealers who fill these orders from their own holdings instead of going into the market to buy. Extraordinary as it seems, the report assumes that orders filled from inventories do not help to sustain market values as do orders executed by immediate transactions on the exchanges. Such reasoning entirely ignores the support of buying for inventory and it also suggests that the odd-lot dealers ought not to part with securities acquired for the purpose of resale.

Apart from this questionable discussion of odd-lot dealing, the statement does not suggest that the SEC is planning to put new and burdensome shackles upon free trading. The recommendations, which are only tentative, follow logically from a study of exchange problems and proceed along lines that have already been fairly well defined.

Shanghai's Fate.

Japan's military victory at Shanghai and its aftermath have brought that great international metropolis to a decisive turning point in its history.

The Japanese have made no bones of their intentions to act on the principle that to the victor belong the spoils. They plan to exercise at Shanghai those functions of sovereignty hitherto exercised in that city by the Chinese government. And to achieve that objective they may not hesitate to flout long-standing treaty rights possessed by the other powers.

How far Japan will go in the latter direction remains to be seen. She may decide that it is the counsel of wisdom to proceed in piecemeal fashion, rather than by one shattering blow, to extend the authority she now possesses in the Chinese portions of Shanghai to the International Settlement and the French Concession as well. But such moderation is likely to be temporary unless the powers give evidence of their determination to resist further Japanese encroachments on their treaty rights.

The issue as between Japan, on the one hand, and those powers, including the United States, Great Britain and France, on the other, has now been reduced to harsh fundamentals. No pleas to Japan for treaty observance, no offers of mediation, no resolutions of censure, have turned Japan from its path of aggression in China. And none is likely to do so under existing circumstances.

Japan can only be restrained either through military action which, for perfectly sound reasons, none of the Western powers has any intention of employing in the present Far Eastern crisis or through the pressure of economic and financial measures which would deprive the island empire of the means of war-making.

The Brussels conference, by showing the futility of mediatory proposals, helped clear the air in this regard. Pressure on Japan, either by the Nine-Power signatories as a group or by any of these nations individually, is now indicated as the necessary next step. And while there is as yet no indication when and to what extent such pressure will be applied, complete inaction on the part of the outside powers with interests in Shanghai can certainly not be taken for granted by Japan.

In the meantime, those powers are compelled to fight a rearguard diplomatic struggle against Japanese encroachments, giving way only so far and so fast as they are compelled to.

Already, in an effort to preserve the international organization of the Chinese maritime customs, which the Japanese threatened to take over, the British inspector general has agreed to appoint Japanese to two highly important administrative posts in the Shanghai area. He has also agreed to dismiss highly placed Chinese at present in the service. And it is practically certain that whatever disposition is made of the customs revenue during the next months, the Chinese government will get none of it.

Thus China, fighting against desperate odds and with its back to the wall, will be dealt another body blow by being deprived of its most important single source of governmental funds — Shanghai's customs receipts.

The rising sun flag of Japan is now floating high over Shanghai. The fate of that city is now in the crucible. Very likely it will emerge from the present ordeal with its status considerably changed. But the determination of the Nine-Power Treaty signatories to stand by that treaty and the fact that these nations have the power to restrain Japan if they want to suggest that this future status may not be entirely in accord with Japan's present desires.

State Labor Laws.

During the past year more than half the States have passed laws regulating employer-employe relationships in one way or another. Five States have approved so-called "little Wagner acts" and eight have either created machinery for adjustment of labor disputes or else strengthened existing systems for that purpose. In the volume and importance of legislation of this type, indeed, the States are said to have "chalked up" a record during the past year.

The progress made strongly suggests that as such laws multiply and State systems of regulation become more efficient, the case for Federal intervention will seem less and less convincing. The States, of course, are handicapped in dealing with interstate activities but not nearly so much so as some people believe, because the line of demarcation between interstate and intrastate commerce is not clearly defined.

In the absence of Federal regulatory legislation, State laws are much less likely to be challenged as unconstitutional. With both Federal and State governments engaged in attempts to regulate employer-employe relationships, however, jurisdictional controversies are likely to be frequent. For that reason alone it is highly desirable for the Federal Government to confine itself to a restricted field with which State governments cannot deal effectively either singly or through interstate compacts.

State laws regulating labor relations have the great advantage of being more flexible than Federal laws can possibly be. Other things being equal, therefore, local control over such intricate problems is always preferable. Now that the States are aroused to action, moreover, they will probably approach nearer and nearer to uniformity of regulatory standards in many respects, while exercising the right to vary their policies in accord with local conditions.

State regulation of labor relations is not merely a supplement to Federal legislation. It is capable of providing a superior type of control, especially if the States take advantage of opportunities to conclude interstate compacts that strengthen local enforcement machinery. That is a fact which Congress would do well to remember before committing the country to further Federal invasion of a new and extremely complicated field of labor relations.

Brains On The Bases.

To a world grown accustomed to cab drivers who discourse on Plato, to champion boxers who lecture on Shakespeare, and to policemen with a passion for Marcel Proust, it will be no great shock to hear that at least two of our big league ball players, Mr. Burgess Whitehead of the Giants and Mr. Moe Berg of the Boston Red Sox, are members of that ultracerebral brotherhood, Phi Beta Kappa.

Some, to be sure, may consider this just another sign of national decadence, and may say sadly that it only remains for the groundkeepers to mark off the foul lines with neat little rows of petunias and phlox. And certainly this intellectualization of baseball would be subversive and un-American if it ever reaches the point where players argue called third strikes with ballistic equations.

Nevertheless, the high-brow invasion of the ball parks suggests certain advantages. For one thing it may clear up a mystery that has long baffled some of our ablest speculative minds, namely, the nature of the conversation that takes place when a series of wild pitches has filled the bases and the catcher has waddled out to meet the pitcher midway between plate and mound. Apparently, the participants in these conversations are under solemn vows never to reveal them.

We do not mean to suggest that a battery of high intelligence quotient would be any more likely to violate the vow of secrecy than others. But, whereas there is simply no surmising what might have been said by such a pair of unpredictables as the late Rube Waddell and the late Addie Schreckingost, it is well known that the conversation of intellectuals runs in well defined grooves. So one could make a guess not too far from the truth, as, for instance, this:

Catcher (handing back the ball)—Old fellow, I just came out to tell you I enjoyed reading that admirable essay of yours in the Hibbert Journal.

Pitcher (embarrassed and pleased)—Awfully good of you to say so, considering your own work. Praise from Sir Hubert——

Catcher (with the faintest hint of patronage)—Not at all. Hope you do more. Well, we seem to be keeping all these good people waiting. How about lunch next week—Wednesday, maybe?

Pitcher: Fine.

Catcher: No, I can't do it Wednesday, after all. I'm to read a paper on Chretien de Troyes to the League of Women Pedants. Make it Thursday.

As to news that another Phi Beta Kappa, Miss Martha Jane Baker, entered a beauty contest in her native State and emerged as "Miss Idaho," there are no reservations to our pleasure. For we remember another beauty contest in which a lady, representing in her mythological way the same things as Phi Beta Kappa ("wisdom, guide of life"), did not win the prize. A lot of trouble came out of that contest, including a 10 years' war and a book now high on the list of required reading for students of the New Program at St. John's College.

Milquetoast Nominated.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that there is already keen speculation in England concerning Neville Chamberlain's probable successor as prime minister. As a close student of British "policy," with respect to Manchuria, Ethiopia, Nazi rearmament, remilitarization of the Rhineland, non-nonintervention in Spain, Nipponese onslaughts in the East, etc., etc., I am venturing to suggest a candidate for the post of Britain's prime minister. I am convinced that I have the ideal man. I will guarantee that he would maintain British "prestige" at its present all-time nadir. My candidate, I need hardly say, is the Right Honorable Sir Ca.par Milquetoast.

F. L. P.

Reply To Mrs. Jenckes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I refer to the suggestion by the Honorable Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, that the Japanese cherry trees, gracing our Tidal Basin, be destroyed, as a retaliation for Japanese action in war-torn China.

In the name of common sense what have these innocent trees, with their beautiful blooms in season, which have added fame to our city and have the admiration of the world, to do with the atrocities committed by Japanese war leaders in China? Why bite the nose to spite the face? There are other ways, I am sure, by which we can show our displeasure toward Japan than by punishing the beautiful cherry trees.

The suggestion also contains propaganda seeds of the most virulent character similar to what was sown here during the late World War, causing the worst national hysteria in our history. We then just tried to uproot everything of Germanic origin, going so far as to change names, etc.

Today it is hard to believe to what ridiculous extremes propaganda drove our supposed clear-thinking Nation. Besides, we should not forget that it was an American admiral, who, with warships, forced a trade pact with a then willingly isolated Japan whose people have been our apt students ever since.

By all means plant American cherry trees, including the wild (for its fine food for our birds) in parks and highways. In some parts of Europe the highways near villages, especially, are planted with fruit trees, the products of which are sold on the trees to the highest bidder by auction for the benefit of the nearby community.

RICHARD J. PAHNKE.

Differing Views Of Gallinger.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Washington Post is to be congratulated for its service in exposing the situation at Gallinger Hospital, as depicted in the article in your issue of November 23. It is high time that the public should be informed of the deplorable conditions that have long existed there, that they may be corrected.

The telephone switchboard facilities are woefully inadequate, the operators overworked; the place is understaffed, both as to doctors and nurses; the food for the staff is atrocious. Good quality meats and vegetables are bought but are so improperly and carelessly cooked as to render them almost uneatable. There is much mismanagement and waste everywhere.

There is (unless it has fallen down through sheer decrepitude) a so-called cottage on the grounds, where some of the women doctors have been housed. The exterior does (or did) not look so bad, but the interior—speaking of slums! When it rained, the water rose several feet in the basement; the house was literally swarming with roaches, ants and rats. The furniture was battered, soiled and broken; rugs in tatters; curtains torn; walls stained, and plaster missing.

And refined, educated women doctors, working long hours, were forced to live in such a place. Innumerable requests to headquarters for repairs, painting, etc., were ignored. Finally, most of the plastering on the ceiling in one of the bedrooms fell, and at long last someone was sent to replace it. After he finished, as there was some plaster left, one of the doctors asked him if he would put it on the bathroom wall, one side of which was without it. He replied that he had no orders to do that, and threw the plaster out on the ground back of the house!

As Mr. Gross states, there is an insufficient supply of most equipment; a large proportion of what is there is almost unusable; rubber tubing cracked and leaking; not enough bed covers, so that blankets are often removed from convalescent patients to be placed over those who are very ill; patients crowded in wards and out into the halls; nurses overworked.

But the climax of this sordid story, in my opinion, is the weird policy of visits to the hospital of Congressional committees. Instead of taking them to the worst spots; instead of having them see things as they are—how badly needed are larger appropriations (and better management of what is already appropriated!) in order that necessary supplies may be secured—forsooth, orders go out for such new equipment as they may have to be brought forth and placed around in the sections to be shown the visitors!

New blankets appear upon beds, and here and there are new hot-water bottles, other rubber articles, and various appurtenances. Orders also go out not to take the committee into certain wards where beds are crowded out into the halls, and conditions are otherwise worse than other sections. After the committee leaves, the new equipment is whisked away and stored again—presumably until another visit.

With such a policy as this, is it surprising that the regrettable situation at Gallinger exists? It cannot all be blamed upon lack of sufficient funds.

M. G. K.

Washington, Nov. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to protest against the article written about Gallinger Hospital in The Post of November 23. I can see the good purpose actuating the article in that it may speed up the razing of certain old buildings which should be condemned and replaced with new.

But such accusations as unsterilized surgical instruments, crumbling instruments flaking off into patients' abdomens, children crying neglected in pain, intermingling of T. B. patients with uninfected patients, could hardly exist under such direction as Dr. Charles Stanley White, one of the Nation's most famous surgeons, and under a modern doctor trained in the modern day such as Dr. Bocock.

I am myself a nurse and have recently sent three patients to Gallinger—one a child for a hernia operation. The child was well treated, cured and so happy he did not want to leave when his time was up; one a dementia precox case. I received prompt and efficient co-operation in placing this case and was impressed with the fine new psycopathic ward building. The third was a brain-tumor case with resultant blindness. This man was opposed to going, having "heard things" about Gallinger. I visited him in the ward. It was in a beautiful new building, one of the sunniest, brightest, cleanest wards I ever saw. The man liked it so well that now all his family say they will go there when they are sick.

But such articles as that in The Post, giving all bad, and no good, will put fear into a generation of Washington's poor who need the service of the city hospital which is their only chance for free treatment.

New buildings are needed. New equipment is needed. So much is true. Doubtless a new operating room may be needed. But surgical technique under Dr. White cannot be bad. And it is not true that patients are neglected and treated unscientifically.

There is much that is good in Gallinger, and they are carrying on with poor equipment and doing a monstrous lot of good among Washington's poor.

I am myself now taking a course in journalism, and I criticize your reporter's article in that it is destructive and harmful in tone, reflecting criticism unjustly where it does not belong and bringing wholesale disrepute upon a hospital whose main fault is simply lack of proper buildings and equipment.

You know every patient that goes into Gallinger receives a bath in disinfectant and has all his clothes put through the fumigator and a disinfectant hair wash. There may be a few cockroaches and water bugs. Many old building have these.

The accusation of neglect to patients I think can be refuted by my own personal experience in sending patients there.

I am sure that you will be willing to correct unjust statements in your article, as well as to curb your reporter's further articles as to wholesale criticism which will only work harm in frightening Washington's needy class.

Out Of Balance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of course I confirm the publication, independent of its related context, of that portion of my recent letter which appeared in your issue of November 21 under the caption "Federal Lynch Law." I would have preferred, however, the same caption to the letter in its entirety. We are having far too much of Federal lynch legislation, and the primary victim is our institutions which those promoting the more abundant life wish to annihilate.

The inevitableness of the law of self-preservation — whether it displays itself in individual or community action—is to some equally as apparent as that of the law of supply and demand. Those who willfully undertake to ignore the latter and who place impediment after impediment in the way of the wealth-producing capacity of the people are at least as likely to go out against the former with pious aphorisms and sweeping statutes bound to create more by way of havoc than they accomplish by way of righting the wrongs against which they are represented as directed.

My purpose in writing you was not to defend lynching as an institution, but to show in juxtaposition the triviality and insincerity of raising a hullaballoo against the extra-legal process employed by a community exasperated beyond endurance and in which its agencies have failed in their function, and at the same time taking no cognizance of the extra-legal assaults upon the institutions of the state by those who have solemnly undertaken their protection. The quotation from Bancroft sums up nicely the relative seriousness of the two offenses.

Turkey Dinner.

THE years don't make a particle of difference to him (said Gran'pop). He doesn't look a day older than he did when I was a small boy, which is longer ago than the day before yesterday. He has the same rich brown complexion and the same wholesome look about him. He is chock full of good things and knows it. One has to have good stuff to be able to lie on one's back with one's legs in the air and still retain one's dignity. But, indeed, it is one of life's paradoxes that one never loses one's dignity until one is conscious of its lack. It may be that "consciousness of lack of dignity" is merely another name for "a sense of humor." It is a thought worth mulling over.

Well, a turkey lacks that consciousness, even when alive. From wattles to parson's nose (that part of a turkey that is last over a fence) he is the essence of dignity even when he seems ridiculous. Perhaps you can't be really ridiculous if you don't know it, no matter how much you amuse other people. And, of course, when you happen to think of conceited persons, that, too, is open to debate.

But we were speaking of the good stuff in him. The word should have been "stuffing." This implies a major operation beginning with the movers and cleaners and winding up with the interior decorators; and the interior decorators I prefer belong to the breadcrumbs-sage-and-onions school.

Some people prefer chestnuts, but that is an old story. I beg your pardon. That's yesterday's slang. "Chestnut" for an old joke found its way into the dictionary, but will probably find its way out again. It is what a modern lexicographer calls a nonce word. But the "chestnut bell," the imaginary bell yesterday's humorist rang when he heard an old wheeze, has already been thrown on the dust heap of the years. It never reached the Big Book.

Well, chestnuts as stuffing are out; and so are oysters, so far as I am concerned. I want my oysters on the half shell at the beginning of a turkey dinner—Chesapeake oysters. And I refuse to insult them with tobasco or any other condiment. They're good as is. Lovely disposition, oysters. Quiet and refined. And their silence isn't broken even when they open up and give their best to the world.

And I like a bit of celery to nibble at while I'm waiting for the turk. There's something clean about the taste of celery. Celery ought to be white, crisp and brittle. Farmers tell me that it is quite a stunt to grow it that way and even more difficult to keep it that way till it gets to market. There's something lacking in the old celery that has been rejuvenated. The very, very best celery must be eaten the day it is cut; and so the specialists have to compromise by growing a kind that is just a little below perfection, but which keeps its virtue on the way to market.

Perhaps the same rule works with human nature. It might explain the saying that the good die young. That is a little hard on us old codgers, but you don't hear us complaining. Eh, Gran'ma?

I think the cranberry was made especially for turkey. Some people like it in tarts, but sauce or jelly for turks is all the good it is for me. And there it is all it should be.

And sweet potatoes, which were potatoes long before the commoner kind were christened. Cut 'em and squash 'em and cover 'em with gravy. Yum, yum! or yam, yam, as the case may be.

Salad, I suppose, but I, for my part, can worry along with cole slaw and pickles.

And for dessert punkin pie, and be careful of the spellin'.

Do you remember how Cinderella's godmother made a carriage out of a pumpkin? Well, a good pastry cook kin — can — give cards and spades to Cinderella's godmother and turn out a finer article.

I like nearly all kinds of pie; apple as a stand-by; huckleberry as a treat; punkin or mince to follow turkey.

For the life of me I don't know whether realization is any better than anticipation. Nor do I know if I deserve the good things that come to me. I either do or I don't. If I do, why should I brag by drawing attention to them. If I don't then the less said about it the better.

But, there! It's a poor heart that can't inconsistently rejoice. Let's thank the good Lord for what's before us and may good digestion wait on appetite.

Hitler And Hegel.

Stuart Chase, in an article in Harper's, criticizes the mystic, meaningless verbosity of Hitler's oratory. Well, Hitler has plenty of precedent, among the German philosophers, for these high-sounding abstractions.

A classical example is Hegel's definition of love.

"Love," said Hegel, "is the ideality of the relativity of the reality of an infinitesimal portion of the absolute totality of the Infinite Being."

Hitler can hardly hope to beat that.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

IT IS THE defensive practice of the professional labor unioneer and the amateur unioneer with political ambitions to smell up with the name of Labor Baiter or Girdlerite anyone who objects to the coercion and extortion which is practiced by some types of labor unions. Nevertheless, in calmer moments members of both major labor groups will admit the existence of certain abuses and of wide-open opportunities for worse abuses in the present forms of organization.

There is just no denying that the autonomy enjoyed by the A. F. of L. unions permits those who obtain control to impose prohibitive initiation fees which exclude able workmen from union membership in occupations in which a union card is absolutely compulsory. One such union now demands an initiation fee of $1,000, annual dues of $60, a varying amount in special assessments and a flat 3 per cent income tax on the gross earnings of the members.

Moreover, as if all this were not sufficient to exclude new talent and preserve the job trust thus created for those who got in on the ground floor, the union reserves the right to turn down applicants even if they should manage to borrow the $1,000.

It does not follow that all members of the union agree with this policy. There are some who would have preferred not to join themselves, but were scared into line by the threat that if they held out they would be placed under a boycott by union men in other organized trades working in the same business. There are some who would like to teach their craft to apprentices or helpers, but dare not do so lest they be fined or possibly expelled, and in that case excluded from employment at their own trade in which they have great skill. They just pay and behave.

* * * *

THIS, I BELIEVE, is tops in initiation fees, but there are other unions whose initial demands are proportionate, the rate of pay considered, and the effort to maintain a job trust at the expense of younger men and other outsiders is too apparent to be denied. In fact, it is not denied but excused, though not justified, on the ground that the admission of great numbers of new members would spread the work so thin that nobody would be satisfied any more and unity would be lost.

Yet this offers no solution. It merely argues that the older man or the man willing and able to scrape up the money for a working license has a special privilege.

The fight between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. for possession of certain unions and the consequent strikes and loss of work by people who have no important grievance against wages, hours or conditions are not denied, either. They are merely excused as unavoidable disorder in a general rough-house between two groups each accusing the other and each pointing out the other's faults.

But in this process a man joins one union under pressure and presently discovers that he is barred from his job and subject to assault because he joined the wrong union. At this point and at other points in the controversy the unioneer's solemn assertion of a man's right to work subject to no denial by Tom Girdler or Henry Ford takes on the hollow, phony sound of mere oratory. His right to work is sacred until it violates the decree of a few union politicians whose appetite for power has been tempted by a group which seems ready for a raid.

* * * * *

There are unions which could not find appropriate praise for the clear-eyed, clean-limbed stalwarts of Dave Beck's A. F. of L. dictatorship in Seattle until they quit the A. F. of L. and went C. I. O. Thereafter Mr. Beck's clear-eyed, clean-limbed stalwarts regarded them as scabs—a harsh and hated word applied to anyone who disagrees with any union's policy—and treated them as such. At this point Mr. Beck's men became sluggers and hoodlums in the official opinion of their late comrades, and Beck himself, so recently a knight in shiny armor, became a bloody tyrant. But Mr. Beck and his stalwarts had not changed. The apostates had not changed, either. The only change was in the apostates' point of view.

The money is more important than most people realize. It is enormous money, but it is collected and administered by private taxing bodies having no public responsibility, and in the great aggregate there is no public accounting. Much of it has been grafted. And what group of capitalists could bring so much money pressure to bear in an election?

There are other imperfections in the system, but intimidation, extortion, irresponsibility, graft and dictator ship must be eliminated if labor is to be any better off under the rule of the unioneer than under the oppression of bad employers.

The Once Over

The Cafeteria Choo-Choo Car.

A grill and cafeteria car is making its debut on American railroads. After 75 years of scaring people away from food during a train trip the roads are showing an inclination to reverse the process.

* * * *

The New Haven road has introduced a streamlined cafeteria car which includes soda fountain and bar; and the realization that there is a big beef stew, salad and kupper-koffee trade which has been neglected all these years seems to be dawning on many railroad systems.

* * * *

Ever since the first iron horse came chugging over the original steel rails, eating on a railroad trip has been something of an adventure in high finance to the average man. Millions of customers never went back to the diner after the first shock.

* * * *

Unless you wanted the inevitable "brown bread and beans," you knew almost anything you had for dinner would set you back from $1.25 to $3.50.

* * * *

The roads have been fooling around with the idea of a car in which a passenger could eat without financial backing, and the new grill car seems to be getting great support from the tray trade.

* * * *

You walk right into the grill-caboose without a shadow of fear in your eyes, grab a tray and get what you want direct from the chef and not from a waiter bent on making more money than the president of the road.

* * * *

Imagine the experience of saying "I'll have cod-fish cakes" on a de luxe train and ordering "one beef stew and coffee" while mingling with the best passengers!

* * * *

If the grill-car idea spreads, the day may be at hand when a man traveling with his wife and kids will no longer have to think of going to the diner alone and smuggling back something for the family.

* * * *

And that soda fountain? Boy, we won't have to play around with those paper cups and that empty ice-water tank much longer!

London Letter

Correspondent Sees Britain With Small Choice But To Resist Threats Implicit In Italy-Germany-Japan Alliance.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

ITALY has joined with Germany and Japan in an anti-Communist pact. The first headline shock is past, and now, according to our various views, we are trying to assess its significance. To some, it is of negligible importance. To others, it is an event which demands a new aim for British diplomacy.

It seems to be accepted here that Italy has not joined for protection against Russia. Nor is mere anti-communist zeal accepted as sufficient motive for the alliance, unless communism is defined in fascist terms to include all democracies, which have been described both in Italy and in Germany as degenerate breeding grounds of communism. It is generally agreed that the alliance has been formed for its diplomatic nuisance value against Britain and France in particular.

One view is expressed by the London Times: "For the present it will be the course of wisdom to accept the triple understanding at its face value. In any case nothing has happened to change the British role in affairs . . . Nor can the pact alter the aims of British foreign policy." The original German-Japanese pact was more embarrassment to its members than advantage, and the Times does not consider the adherence of Italy makes much difference.

Avoid War And Maintain Empire, Hopes Of Britain.

WHAT ARE these aims of British foreign policy which need not be altered? In the most general terms, presumably they are to protect the British empire, and to keep Britain out of war. Italy's adherence to an anti-communist pact does not make these aims obsolete. But it is different with the specific aims of British foreign policy which have been pursued in recent years in the hope they would promote the general aims.

These are the specific aims: To prevent a consolidation of aggressive powers against the empire. To avoid condemnation of, or opposition to, aggressive powers when they expand at the expense of others. To avoid as many commitments as possible pending an overwhelming British rearmament. To avoid making any economic, territorial or political concessions to the have-not powers, with the vague suggestion in the background that if these powers stop being aggressive and become of a more peaceful mind, they may expect some slight redress of more important grievances.

Coloring these aims is an inclination among part at least of our cabinet to favor the Fascist powers for idealogical reasons, which is not offset by any corresponding inclination among another part of the cabinet to favor the left extreme.

It is being argued by those who hold the opposite view to the Times that the signature of Italy to the pact proves that the first three of the specific aims listed above have been frustrated. While Germany was a defeated victim of war, we tagged along with the French in keeping her down. While Italy was unimportant we were her friend. When Hitler rebuilt German power, we hoped to keep Italy away from her. When Italy became the threat to the empire in the Mediterranean we played our cards to keep Germany separate. When Italy went into Spain, we still hoped to keep her away from Germany at the same time that we hoped by being nice to her that she would prefer our friendship to Germany's, and would be grateful.

The net result of these maneuvers is that Italy and Germany are closer together than at any time, that Italy has secured a footing around the Mediterranean which at the least can be a great embarrassment to us, and that Japan is grasping at China.

Further, our tacit invitation to Germany and Italy to wait until we have rearmed so that we need fear none of their threats has been answered by an alliance which may easily be intended to be anti-British Empire more than anti-communist. As the union between potential aggressors has tightened, that between the democratic countries, and between ourselves and our own potential allies, France and Russia, has been weakened.

Nation Seen Faced By Three Alternatives.

IF THIS ANALYSIS is correct, British policy will most certainly need to be changed. What other lines can it follow? Three rival theories hold the field.

First, it is suggested that Italy will be satisfied by her present empire, that Japan will have more than she can handle in China, and that peace can be secured by making to Germany the colonial concessions she demands. There is a number of fairly influential pro-Germans (including Lord Lothian, for example) who urge that Germany should be given her colonies, a policy which can be read into many Times editorials.

Second may be distinguished the argument that a clash between the aggressors and the empire is now inevitable, and that the proper answer to an alliance of plaintiffs is an alliance of defendants. Britain should meet the menace by tightening her connections with France, and those of France with Russia, and at the same time should try to secure as close collaboration with the United States as can be obtained.

It should be emphasized that this idea of alliance with Russia, either directly or via Paris, is becoming increasingly popular among many conservatives; it is by no means confined to friends of communism. This second proposal, if adopted, would duplicate fairly close the conditions of pre-war Europe, with nations divided into armed camps on strategical, not idealogical, principles.

The third argument is advaneed by those who have been strongest supporters in the past of the League of Nations system of collective security. It is maintained that the colonial problem can be solved only through an undiscriminating international administration for all colonies not now fit for self-government. But this aim would not be advanced merely by giving colonies to Germany or Italy, whose ambitions would feed on what they get and would not be satisfied. For peace, imperialism must die, not flourish.

Argument Would Forbid Yielding To Fascist Pair.

THEREFORE, there must not be any rash response to Germany and Italian pressure, which would only impress upon those countries that they can get what they want by shouting hard enough. This does not mean we must at once anticipate world war and prepare accordingly with straight military alliances.

We must certainly strengthen the democratic and nonaggressive countries, but this can most rapidly be done by firm resistance to further threats from Germany and Italy. And we must made it clear that we are willing to proceed with a general solution of world problems of colonies, raw materials, trade, armaments and so on along international lines the moment we are convinced that Germany and Italy are prepared to change their present mental outlook.

The basis of this third policy is that Britain, a democratic country, can advocate application of democratic principles only to international problems. Before these principles can be acceptable to the present aggressive powers, they must find from experience that along their present paths they will not make progress. They can be made to realize this since the powers who reject their dictatorial principles, not their just complaints, can if united and determined present an opposition too great for the aggressive nations to face even when in alliance. And further, only on the basis of joint adherence to democratic international principles can unison between the peaceful powers be obtained.

The difficulty with this third argument is that it requires Britain to reverse her retreat before aggression, to announce her principles and the solutions which they require, and to make a definite stand against further threats. This presents the nation with a risk now, instead of tomorrow. It seems so much easier to ignore the whole problem, to bribe the barbarians with a little concession today, or even to set about securing insurances for fear of war tomorrow, than to stand on a principle and risk something at once. Our policy has for so long been to avoid issues we don't like that it is asking rather too much of us to hold fast. Yet hold fast is the only dog.

Temporary Injunction Against Pickets Given

Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court yesterday granted a preliminary injunction to the Quaker City Linoleum Co., 601 F street northwest, prohibiting pickets from parading in front of its store.

At a hearing yesterday Attorneys George D. Horning, jr., and James A. Cobb asserted the picketing began November 6, when company employes refused to join the Carpet, Linoleum & Soft Tile Layers Local Union, No. 65, an American Federation of Labor affiliate. The injunction was ordered pending a final hearing.

Halifax's Visit

By Barnet Nover

PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN has revealed that, in the recent talks with Hitler, Lord Halifax made no pledges to Germany and had none to make. The British cabinet member had only come to exchange views with the Fuerher.

Precisely what Halifax said on that occasion and what he was told is still a diplomatic secret. But enough has leaked out to indicate that the latest British attempt to bring about happier relations with the Third Reich has, so far, had no more constructive results than did previous efforts.

This Mr. Chamberlain did not, of course, admit. His statement to the House of Commons was couched in the usual optimistic generalities. He spoke of the Halifax visit to Germany as being valuable "in furthering the desire . . . for the establishment of closer mutual understanding." But in saying that he was saying what is always said after any exchange of views between statesmen of different lands. It is certainly a fact that while "closer mutual understanding" may foreshadow an effort to bridge the gulf that divides two nations it may also mean that the two nations are now more aware than ever of the existence of that gulf.

* * * *

UNOFFICIAL reports indicate that if Halifax made no offers to Hitler, the Fuehrer made certain demands on Great Britain.

He is said to have proposed a number of conditions without which Germany would agree to no general settlement with the democratic powers. Among these, the reports have it, are a recognition by the London and Paris governments of Germany's right to colonies and a pledge by those governments giving the Third Reich a free hand in Central Europe.

Obviously Great Britain is not prepared to make either of these concessions and if Britain were, France is not. On the basis of existing reports, therefore, some observers surmise that the Halifax visit was a flat failure and instead of leading to an appeasement of the present European crisis may only intensify it.

* * * *

IT IS MUCH too early to reach so pessimistic a conclusion. Even if the Halifax visit did nothing more than to educate Great Britain in the realities of the present German temper and the extraordinary difficulties that stand in the way of an Anglo-German settlement which important elements in both countries desire, it will have served a useful purpose.

For a long time the British have laid great store by the man-to-man approach as a means of settling European problems. In his recent exchange of letters with Mussolini, Premier Chamberlain showed that he, in particular, favored this method. It is hard for the British people to realize that the British readiness to compromise is regarded as a sign of weakness by the dictators.

But Britain's education in the realities has been slow. And it has unquestionably been fostered by the unreadiness of the British government to take decisive action anywhere if such action may lead to a war for which they are not yet, as they believe, prepared.

* * * *

HOWEVER, there is still another side to the Halifax visit which must not be ignored.

The original invitation to the former Viceroy of India to come to Berlin had nothing to do with politics. Halifax was merely invited to inspect the great exhibition of hunting trophies assembled at Berlin under the direction of Gen. Goering. Suddenly, however, the British government decided to use the occasion of Halifax's presence in Berlin as a means of sounding out Hitler as to his plans.

Exactly who or what was responsible for this decision by the London government is not entirely clear. It is no secret that a powerful group in Great Britain has for some time been agitating for an Anglo-German rapprochement at whatever cost, provided it permitted Great Britain a period of relative peace. But it is possible to surmise that one factor in the decision to exchange views with the Fuehrer was the then impending announcement of Britain's readiness to begin formal negotiations for an Anglo-American reciprocal trade pact.

* * * *

ON ITS ECONOMIC side alone such a pact is bound to have an enormous influence on world affairs. For between them the United States, Great Britain and the British dominions are responsible for a considerable part of world trade. It is impossible, however, to divorce politics from economics. Thus the political implications of an Anglo-American trade pact may also prove considerable.

The very fact that Great Britain is now prepared to talk Mr. Hull's language is being interpreted, and not without reason, as further proof that the two great English-speaking democracies are drawing together, at least economically. Together with Anglo-American co-operation in the field of finance and their co-operation, if for very limited objectives, at Brussels the development is important.

* * * *

NOW AS BETWEEN the fascist dictatorships on the one hand and the great democracies on the other the balance of force rests clearly with the latter.

Hitherto, however, the democracies have been disunited while the aggressive dictatorships have more and more closed their ranks. But if the situation now changes, if a larger measure of co-operation obtains henceforth between Washington, London and Paris the dictatorships would no longer find themselves in an unchallenged position. And while they could still aid each other diplomatically they are in no position to ease each other's increasingly serious economic difficulties.

What Lord Halifax told Hitler is not known. It is not impossible that he made some reference in his talks with the Fuehrer to the proposed Anglo-American trade pact. And even if he did not it is certain that Germany's present rulers are acutely aware of the development. But whether Hitler is or can be made, under any circumstances, to reverse the German trend toward autarchy is anything but clear.

Newspapers

By William Lyon Phelps

Here And Abroad.

Do Continental people read newspapers more diligently than men and women of English speech?

Sometime ago the New York World ceased to exist, and this year saw the disappearance of the New York American. And almost at the some moment, one of the most famous newspapers of Great Britain, the Morning Post, faded away, and the London Spectator says its distinctive note is sorely missed. The Spectator also says that the number of daily newspapers in London is now reduced to six, but that "in Prague, where I have just been spending a few weeks, the number, I am told, is little, if anything, short of 50." In Paris there are about 25 daily papers. The Spectator writer proceeds, "It would we worth while giving some intensive study to both the causes and effects of the rationalization of newspaper production in this country. One chief reason for the difference between London and the other capitals mentioned, is, of course, the fact that in Paris and Prague many papers are kept alive and run at a loss either in the interest of political parties or to gratify some rich man's whim; every one of the six principal London journals is a sound commercial proposition."

* * * *

I was impressed when I was in Athens by the enormous number of newspaper readers; editions kept pouring out all day long, and were bought and read with insatiable eagerness.

I myself read three daily papers every morning and two every evening; and when I am traveling about the country, if the train stops a few moments, I get out and buy the local newspaper; it is often an indication of the level of general intelligence in the community.

* * * *

The disappearance of the London Morning Post is surprising. England is just about the size of the State of Michigan, but has a population of over 50,000,000. Thus every morning paper in London can appear on the breakfast table of every family in the whole country.

"Don't say 'gotta,'" the boss said. "Say 'hafta.'"

"Well, I still think you gotta have turkey on Thanksgiving."

"It's a good thing to have," the boss said. "It's a good thing to have if you can get it."

TOM McCARTHY.

"But I need to have some for my column, on account of it being Thanksgiving," I told him.

"Well, then, put some turkey in your column," the boss said.

About that time, one of the boys from the front office came in. We asked him if he knew anything about raising or cooking turkeys. He didn't, but he said that his mother could tell us all about such things . . . except that she was up in Massachusetts. So he wasn't much help.

And then a Western Union boy came in, but he couldn't give us any stories about turkeys. He said that he preferred the white meat to dark, but, other than that, he wouldn't talk for publication.

Of course, maybe we were trying the wrong people, but we couldn't figure, offhand, how you get a turkey story for a Thanksgiving column, and we couldn't see any harm in a little offhand experimentation.

But, after a while, we saw we weren't getting any place. I thought maybe a story debunking the first Thanksgiving might be in line, but the boss turned thumbs down on that.

"I'm a Mayflower man myself," he said. "We won't have any debunking of my ancestors. No sir," the boss said, "that first Thanksgiving was absolutely the McCoy."

"I don't recall the circumstances," I said. And the boss didn't, either, so we were right back where we started.

* * * *

"WHAT'VE YOU got to be thankful for," the boss said, after a long siege of thought, during which it was very quiet in the office. And I knew right then we had the column. We'd go out and ask people what they had to be thankful for.

Well, it didn't start off in the right spirit. We should have seen that from our first interview.

"Here's a nice prospect over here," the boss said. So we went up to a big fellow lounging in front of the building next door and asked him what he had to be thankful for.

"I'm thankful the cops haven't tagged me yet," he said.

"You mean," said the boss, "you're thankful the flatfeet haven't put the finger on you. And that you're glad you're still out of the stir."

"That's right," the big fellow said.

"Write that down," the boss said. So I wrote it down.

"And now would you give us your name and profession," the boss said. But the big fellow just shook his head.

"I'm not giving you my name," the big fellow said, "but I will give you my profession. I'm a bookmaker—a 'bookie' to you."

"You mean," the boss said, "you accept race bets and are ashamed of your profession . . . so you won't give your name?"

"Naw, I'm not ashamed of it," the big fellow said, "but the minute my tag gets in the paper, my number's up. One of these Tracys would sneeze me."

"You mean you'd be arrested?" the boss said.

"Yeah, one of those Tracys would sneeze me. That's what I said."

* * * *

"IT DOESN'T seem to me," the boss said, "that this chap is quite what we're looking for."

So we went down the street and looked for somebody else to interview.

"There's a very happy group," the boss said, when three young ladies swung through the door of an office building.

"Yes, indeed," I said. "They look as though they had all manner of things to be thankful for."

"Young ladies," the boss said, but the young ladies kept right on walking.

"I don't know them," one of the young ladies said.

"Just a minute, young ladies, we'd like to ask you a few questions."

"Of all the nerve!" the girl in the blue hat said.

"Don't get us wrong," the boss said. "We just want to know what you've got to be thankful for. We're inquiring reporters."

"Don't pay any attention to them, Elsie," one of the girls said . . . and they kept right on down the street.

"Are we mice or are we mice?" the boss said . . . so we tried again.

"Ladies," the boss said, "we are looking for a Thanksgiving column. We want to know what you've got to be thankful for. We want to know what people are being thankful for this year. We are inquiring reporters."

"Inquiring reporters," sniffed the girl called Elsie. "That's a new line. Run along now, buddy, before I call a cop."

Well, that sort of set the boss and me back on our heels. He started to get red, and I don't know how I looked, but I did feel pretty silly.

"I know," the boss said, "we should have brought along an empty camera, just for effect. Then they'd know who we were."

"It's a little too late for that, now," I said. "My heart just isn't in this any more."

So we slunk back to the Post building, and we still don't know what people are being thankful for this year.

Ford Confident Congress Will Help Business

Motor Magnate Calls Present Recession 'Temporary and Artificial.'

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 24.—Henry Ford today said he was confident the present session of Congress would accomplish "something really constructive" as an aid to American business, and added he was sure the United States would not be drawn into another world war.

He termed the present business recession "temporary and artificial." It was not a setback, he said, but a "pause before another climb."

"No one," he said, "need look at next year with any uncertainty."

Control Price of Loans.

Ford referred to the tax on surplus earnings as "a move on the part of certain exponents of an out-of-date financial system to control industry." He explained that without surplus, business could not expand without borrowing. "In most instances," he said, "the borrowing must be made of financial interests that demand control of business as the price of their loans."

"The United States will not be drawn into another world war," he said, "because there are 2,000,000 well-educated veterans here who know the futility of such conflict."

Ford's glass-making steel-farbicating and rubber-growing industries, he said, were not intended to create a "vertical trust," but merely to "protect ourselves by keeping an eye on processes and costs in the industries we rely upon for our materials."

"I don't believe in 'self-sufficiency' in this respect," he added. "We obtain parts and equipment from 6,000 suppliers, whose work supports 3,000,000 persons."

"Overproduction," Ford said, "is a fiction. Up to date all we've ever had is underproduction. Produce a plentiful supply of necessities and get a system of distribution that really distributes, and the job of production will not leave us any time to think of overproduction. We only hear that term in times of a profit-made scarcity."

He reiterated his disagreement with the contention of some economists that the "machine age" has curtailed employment.

"And don't forget," he added, "that machinery becomes obsolete faster than most people believe."

Asked whether periodical depressions were unavoidable, Ford said:

"There may be natural reason for a period of business recession and if there is, such a recession is meant to be beneficial, but certainly there is no reason why a period of business recession need be a period of human distress."

Prizes Awarded In D. C. Bird Show

The award of silver cups, trophies and ribbons to prize-winning exhibitors at the recent third annual bird show of the National Capital Canary Club at the Hotel Continental were announced yesterday. More than 600 canaries were entered and wild birds, such as the gray java sparrow, paradise wydah and African siskin, also were exhibited.

The prize winners included Raymond Letner, for the best bird in the show; G. E. Letner, for the best bird having a 1937 club band; F. J. Jefferson for the best cinnamon Yorkshires in the show; R. G. Marks, for the largest evenly or unevenly marked Yorkshire; G. C. Black, for the best Hartz type male in the open classes; Miss Pearl Kolb, of Baltimore, for the best evenly marked canary in the show; E. M. Jameson, for the best Hartz type female in the open classes; M. D. Smith, for the best display of four or more birds; Master B. Marks, for the best bird owned by a junior boy, and Miss Roseamelia Rosson, for the best bird owned by a junior girl.

Vargas Abolishes Governors' Posts

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Nov. 24 (U.P.) President Getulio Vargas, strengthening his newly proclaimed corporate dictatorship in Brazil, tonight abolished all but one state governorship and named the governors federal interventors in their respective states.

Gov. Benedito Valladares of Minas Geraes was excluded and will remain governor of Brazil's most populous state.

The decree placed complete power in the hands of the president, inasmuch as he abolished all state and municipal legislatures as well as the federal congress when he promulgated his new constitution November 10. Federal interventors are responsible only to the chief executive. They also are removable only by the President.

Coalition Forms Belgian Cabinet

Brussels, Nov. 24 (AP).—Gen. Paul Emile Janson, liberal premier-designate, succeeded today in forming a coalition cabinet, giving Belgium a government for the first time since Paul Van Zeeland resigned as premier October 25.

Janson, whose success was a direct result of King Leopold's appeal to patriotism of leaders of the three principal political parties, announced six Socialist ministers of the Van Zeeland cabinet would continue.

Two new Catholic Party ministers were H. Marck, transport, and Dubus de Warnaffe, justice. Janson and G. Dierck, who was given the interior portfolio, were new liberal ministers.

Montague Soon to Wed Coast Social Leader

Beverly Hills, Calif., Nov. 24 (AP).—Close friends of John Montague, the one-time "mystery man" of golf, today said he and socially prominent Mrs. Esther Plunkett were planning to be married "very soon."

Mrs. Plunkett greeted Montague with a kiss Monday night when he returned from New York, where he won acquittal on a 7-year-old charge of robbery. Friends predicted the ceremony might occur "today, Thanksgiving or later in the week."

Greyhound Bus Strike Fails to Cripple Capital

tor John L. Conner flew to Cleveland last night in a special Army plane. He met with representatives of the company and the union at about 9 p. m., but the conferences collapsed after constant negotiation.

Connor early today issued the following statement:

"I was unable to avert the strike set for 12:01 a. m. I am advised by Mr. Harvey that the strike is on but I will attempt to mediate the dispute as both sides have agreed to meet with me. I will stay here hoping to effect settlement."

Drivers Ready for Service.

The company in Washington employs about 300 drivers and Major said he had 42 regular drivers ready for immediate service.

"I think these men will see me through for several days, at least," Major declared. "I expect no trouble in maintaining schedules."

"All drivers are hereby ordered to report for duty immediately or turn in their tools."

Major said "immediately" meant within the next 24 hours. "If the men fail to report as ordered, they're out of a job, that's all," he declared.

The first scheduled departure from Washington after the passing of the strike deadline was for Richmond. The trip left in three sections, all of them with capacity loads of passengers homeward bound for the Thanksgiving holiday.

The first section was driven, Major said, by Alex Markham, a driver of five years' service; the second by E. J. Morrison with three years' service, and the thrid by Frank Elmore, with eight years' service.

The strike, called by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, was ascribed by union officials to the refusal of the company to meet demands for wage increases and the closed shop after six weeks' negotiations.

Company officials said all replacements were being made by drivers regularly employed by the company.

Doctors Blame Bad Laboratory At Gallinger

'Delays Beyond Reason' in Tests Laid to Small Epxert Staff.

By Gerald G. Gross.

In any hospital the saving or loss o. a life may lie in the laboratory. Speed and reliability, whether the order be for a blood-matching test, an emergency transfusion or merely a routine Wassermann for syphilis, are prerequisites to accurate diagn.ses and treatment.

A patient is admitted to have a broken arm set. A Wassermann blood test is taken as a matter of routine. It develops that the person has syphilis, perhaps without having known it. The arm fracture becomes trivial by comparison.

In 1929, when the new Medical-Surgical Building was opened at Gallinger Hospital and the number of patients averaged 270 daily, the institution's laboratory made a total of 34,472 tests. In the year ended last June 30, the respective figures rose to 868 and 123,208.

Two Aides Work Free.

The laboratory staff today consists of Dr. H. H. Leffler, director; four technicians and two orderlies. There are, in addition, a young woman graduate of George Washington University, who is serving without pay; also a young man, who reports each morning and works free.

"I don't know where we would be without these two hard workers who are donating their services," Dr. Leffler said yesterday. "We receive 40 to 60 blood-count orders every day. We have only one technician for this type of work and if he can handle 30 efficiently, that's a good day's work."

The laboratory chief pointed to several boxes containing glass sildes and explained they were two or three days behind time.

Delays 'Beyond Reason.'

Every patient who is admitted to Gallinger, no matter what this complaint, receives a blood count, Wassermann test and urinalysis—or, at least, he is supposed to. If the laboratory had no other responsibility than to make these routine examinations its skeleton staff would be deluged, according to Dr. Leffler. With the numerous non-routine types of tests to be made—cultures, smears, cross-matching of bloods and so on—the situation is almost unbelievable.

In the light of these facts, it is not difficult to understand the written complaint of one member of Gallinger's staff of visiting physicians:

"On several occasions a request for immediate laboratory work has been delayed beyond all reason. As for matching blood for transfusions, a procedure which is often an emergency, there are not hours of delay but often days, and if the patient requires this procedure at night it is usually impossible to get the work done and donors are not available unless they come in with the patient—relatives or friends."

Charity Accepts Charity.

The laboratory, undermanned and underequipped as it is, still stands as a good example of what has been accomplished in the last few years, under Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock, toward making minimum appropriations produce maximum results.

The building in which it is housed was put up by emergency relief labor. Two men who were hired as orderlies have been trained to take blood specimens from patients and perform other technical duties. Two technicians are working without pay. And now a philanthropic Washington woman has offered to buy and donate $5,000 worth of sorely needed equipment and pay the salaries of two additional technicians.

A charity hospital is, in its turn, accepting charity. But to hold aloof from these "handouts" of money and service would make a pathetic situation well nigh hopeless.

"In the last 24 hours," said Dr. Leffler, "there were 49 new admissions. This is unusually low. When the pneumonias and the respiratory infections start soon with colder weather daily admissions will jump to 70 and 80 and higher.

Tests Wait for Days.

"The three routine tests should be taken on every one of these new arrivals. Not only that, the results should be ready within 24 hours after a patient comes in. Rarely is this achieved. Some tests have to wait for days.

"There is only one technician each for serology (syphilis tests), bacteriology, chemistry and hematology. We keep up fairly well on serological orders, but on the other types of work we are swamped."

In the matter of equipment, the Washington woman who has promised to help has obtained estimates on two centrifuges, two microscopes, one incubator, one rotary microphone, one colorimeter and one filing cabinet.

Although Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer and titular head of Gallinger Hospital, did not reveal specifically what was considered yesterday at the first meeting of a doctors' committee named to investigate the institution, it is believed the laboratory problem was among topics for discussion and will be scrutinized further as the inquiry progresses.

(Other phases of the Capital's "bete noir," Gallinger Hospital, will be presented tomorrow.)

Officials Plan 3-Point Relief For Gallinger

duce the operating expenses, Seckinger said.

Dr. Haven Emerson, dean of public health administration at Columbia University, recently stated:

"As the most effective way of reducing the demand for hospital care, the provision of medical and nursing services for the sick in their homes seems likely to produce the best results."

It was pointed out that Minneapolis is now operating efficiently under such a plan and that New York is planning a marked extension of facilities for medical externe service.

At the same time, the Health Department planned a concerted drive on the District's high infant mortality rate.

Prenatal Care Stressed.

Emphasis will be placed on importance of prenatal care and an attempt will be made to bring expectant mothers under the services of physicians by the fifth month of pregnancy.

All patients who apply to the permit bureau for admittance to the hospital will be requested to attend prenatal clincs.

"Expectant mothers who present no abnormalities, with home conditions satisfactory, are to be delivered at home by the outpatient obstetrical services," Dr. J. B. Jacobs, chief obstetrician of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare stated.

The director of maternal welfare will instruct the permit bureau to issue a permit to the hospital if the patient's condition warrants delivery in hospital or if home conditions are unsuitable for delivery, health officials said.

Syphilis Blamed.

"It is highly important that abnormalities of the expectant mother be treated during the prenatal period," Dr. Jacobs declared, "particularly in reference to syphilitic mothers."

In a large obstetrical service in the United States, 52 per cent of the still births or infant deaths under two weeks are caused by syphilis, Dr. Jacobs stated.

"About 95 per cent of these mothers would have delivered normal live babies if mothers had been adequately treated for syphilis early in pregnancy," he said.

50 Persons Drown In Jamaica Floods

Kingston, Jamaica, Nov. 24 (U.P.).—Fifty persons were reported as downed today in Portland Parish, near the eastern tip of Jamaica, when floods caused by heavy rains washed away a mountain villa.

Swollen mountain streams washed out railway and highway bridges and caused landslides which blocked all roads and isolated the area from the rest of the island. Damage to government and private property was reported heavy.

Jury of Children Likes Mural, So It Will Stay at Glenn Dale

Allen Accepts Verdict of Six, Overruling Ruhland; WPA Artists Aggrieved at Method of Reaching Decision But Not by Result.

press was shut out by solid wall between waiting room and an information office which had been reserved for reporters. Through a tightly closed window, they peered at the young jurists and tried to decide whether No. 4's grin was one of contempt, admiration or mere congeniality.

Boy Likes Colors.

Comments of the children, whose names were kept secret, were disclosed after the report was turned over to Commissioner Allen.

Most apathetic of the children was No. 2, a boy. He seemed loath to say anything at all. Finally Miss Lind prodded him gently by suggesting, "This is what the children see when they first come in."

No. 2's reaction to this, according to the stenographer's record, was, "I've seen all I want to." The rest of his testimony consisted of a relatively complete list of the children's stories introduced into the painting, polished off with the statement, "There are a lot of bright colors . . . They look like oil colors."

Commissioner Allen conceded that No. 2 was not over-enthusiastic. "But the other children definitely like the mural . . . and it stays," he said.

Pleased But Critical.

Most of the pupils were puzzled by a figure which appears at right center on the painting. An old woman at a spinning wheel, surrounded by six children, she apparently was intended as a symbol of Mother Goose. No. 1 juror, a girl, confessed she did not recognize this group but was quick to point out Humpty Dumpty, the Cow that Jumped Over the Moon and the others. "Very pretty" was her opinion of the picture.

No. 4, a little girl who revealed her name as Betty, was the most vocal. She recognized the Three Blind Mice but thought it funny that the first mouse is "only blind in one eye." The Queen of Hearts "doesn't look like a queen would look because she has on rouge and queens don't wear much rouge." Humpty Dumpty "looks like he's tired."

The more Betty looked the more she saw. Finally she decided, "This is very interesting." On the way home she modified her stand by adding, "I didn't really like it, because it was too crowded. I don't think they ought to have tried to put so many stories in such a small place."

Boy of 10 Supercilious

No. 3, a boy, thought the picture was fine "for small children" of seven, eight and nine. (He himself, like the others, is 10.) At that age "you study these things and know about them. They are more interested in Mother Goose than children in the sixth grade." He himself prefers to look at pictures of knights.

No. 5 talked as though she had learned the purpose of the visit as well as several big words before she arrived at the santiarium. When Miss Lind asked her if she saw anything interesting in the room, she retorted, "Do you mean whether the picture should be here?"

"There's a bear trying to get up a tree [illegible] another bear," she went on. "I think that's kind of cute . . . The two bears signify the Three Bears story."

The little colored boy, the last to testify, had a constructive suggestion to make. "I think there is one that ought to be in there—the Old Woman in the Shoe," he volunteered. Despite this ommission, he believes "it is a very nice mural to have here. I think the children would enjoy the pictures."

Artists Aggrieved.

Commissioner Allen expects to turn the report over to a child psychologist to obtain an expert opinion on it, but does not intend to reverse his decision no matter what the psychologist thinks.

District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, whose denunciation of the mural as "grotesque" precipitated the row, has nothing more to say on the subject.

Supporters of Bernice Cross, WPA artist who painted the mural, still have plenty to say. Three members of the Artists Union yesterday paid a visit to Russell Parr, regional head of WPA projects, who confessed he shares their objections to a decision made by children. Particularly aggrieved was Allen Flavelle, whose mural at Glenn Dale was painted over last week. Others in the delegation were David Morris and Rose Fox.

Parr considers "the idea of the children's jury the silliest thing I ever heard of." It is possible that WPA "will make no more murals in the District until we have definite assurance that the contracting party will abide by the agreement into which he has entered for these works," he added.

Privilege Tax Payers Given Extra Ten Days

Payment of the first-half installment on business privilege tax as due November 20, was extended by District Commissioners yesterday for a period of 10 days from the date of billing of individual taxpayers.

The Commissioners acted on request of Assessor Fred D. Allen, who reported impossibility of mailing all bills in time for payment by end of the month.

Briton Blames Market Drops Upon Roosevelt

Conservative Tells Parliament President Imperiled Peace.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 24.—Robert J. G. Boothby, Conservative, charged in the House of Commons today that President Roosevelt started market declines, thereby endangering peace.

Boothby said it was time someone did "some plain speaking on this side of the Atlantic."

"What is the use of making a trade agreement or attempting to co-operate with a government which seems determined to sabotage the economic system under which we live—without any alternative system put in its place?" he asked.

Cites Spring Statement.

"In the spring of this year the President of the United States of America suddenly announced that in his opinion commodity prices were too high, although actually they were lower than the level of 1926, which hitherto had been his declared objective.

"He followed this by doing everything in his power to discourage investments in capital industries of the United States.

"Confidence, which is so much easier to undermine than to inspire, was absolutely shattered, and this has led inevitably to acute deflation—deflation which involved a catastrophic fall not only in stock markets but in commodity prices and the industrial output.

Fears Loss of Trade.

"As a result of that, at a very ciritcal moment, the underlying strength of democratic countries has been greatly diminished and the danger of war sensibly increased," said Boothby.

He declared that if Roosevelt continued his policy, "which, by discouraging investments, restricting the freedom of markets and deflating prices, violates every sound economic principle," there will be "no trade to agree upon in a trade agreement."

Boothby added that "whether we like it or not," Britain's economic fortunes are tied to those of the United States.

Wage Petition Signers Reach A Total of 180

Mrs. Norton and Rayburn Predict Necessary 218 Will Be Achieved.

afternoon, but re-signed the petition later after conferences with a number of his colleagues.

Opponents and backers of the bill struggled throughout the day for an advantage.

Administration strategists struck out boldly early in the session, shortly after Representative Ralph Church (Republican), Illinois, had blocked over-Thanksgiving Day adjournment by objecting to Rayburn's unanimous consent request. Church later sought to withdraw his objection before boarding a train for Chicago but Rayburn, who had shifted his strategy to provide for a brief House session today with immediate adjournment to Monday, said coldly:

"I now have no request pending."

The Administration move to win signers for the petition came when Chairman Norton announced the House Labor Committee, by a vote of 16-to-4, had agreed to amend the bill, when it reached the floor, to abandon the proposed labor standards board and place administration of the measure under the Labor Department.

Reproaches Scoffers.

Mrs. Norton's announcement was received with some applause. Then she continued:

"I want to say to you that we are approaching Thanksgiving Day, the day that we Americans offer thanks for all the blessings we have received during the year. I do not see how any member of this House can enjoy his Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow if he fails to put his name to that petition this afternoon."

Mocking laughter greeted her remark. Flushing, Mrs. Norton, who had started to turn away, swung around and with her jaw thrust out, said bitterly:

"Oh, you gentlemen may scoff as you please, but how are you going to face your constituents and say that you refused the workers of America a living wage, when you yourselves are living in comfort? I do not think when this bill comes before the House that any member will dare to make that admission."

Hearty applause came this time, as Mrs. Norton strode angrily to her seat and Speaker Bankhead announced gently:

"The time of the gentlewoman from New Jersey has expired."

The action of the Labor Committee in dropping the Labor Board was regarded widely as a direct concession to the American Federation of Labor, whose president, William Green, attacked the board proposal on the grounds of the federation's previous "unfortunate experiences" with the National Labor Relations Board.

Many members, Mrs. Norton said yesterday, had told her that if the board plan were abandoned, they would sign the petition. But numerous Southern opponents of the bill yesterday continued forming around the bill of Senator George L. Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, which would fix a flat statutory minimum hourly wage and maximum work-week with enforcement placed under the Department of Justice. Some cling to the same plan, with enforcement under the Federal Trade Commission.

Filibuster Cautious.

Watchful opponents of the bill yesterday maintained a cautious filibuster. The parliamentary situation, the day being calendar Wednesday, contained the possibility that in the roll call of committees, the Labor Committee might be reached, whereupon Mrs. Norton could call up the beleaguered bill. In order to block this, Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), Virginia, one of the Southern bloc which has held the bill for many weeks in the Rules Committee, raised a point of no quorum early in the session, and forced a time-consuming roll call.

Another Southerner, Chairman Henry Steagall, of the Banking and Currency Committee, then brought up a minor measure as his committee was called, and much time was spent in threshing this out. Then Representative John Taber (Republican), New York, forced a second roll call on a point of no quorum, and more minutes ticked away. Finally, Mrs. Norton, amused by the time-eating tactics, announced her committee had no intention of calling up the bill. Forthwith, Representative Clarence Lea (Democrat), California, moved that further proceedings under the calendar be dispensed with.

When this was agreed to, "Judge" Smith and other Southerners serving as watchdogs against the bill, moved swiftly toward the exits.

Machado to Face Extradition Court Certain of Victory

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Four years of flight from murder and embezzlement charges were ended today for Gen. Gerardo Machado, deposed Cuban President who in 1933 escaped mobs bent on lynching him.

The 68-year-old general, bedridden in a New York hospital, said he would surrender there Monday and face extradition proceedings.

He is confident the warrant for his arrest will be dismissed as was a similar warrant against Gen. Alberto Herrera.

Machado's lawyer, Francis A. O'Neill, said the murder of Blas Maso, of which Machado was accused, had been adjudged a political offense and that alleged mass murders in August, 1933, were "in reality deaths due to the exercise of the police power."

Edison to Open Bridge.

Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, will press a telegraph key at 11 p. m., today and thereby open the Thomas A. Edison Memorial Bridge at Fort Myers, Fla., on the spot where the late inventor enjoyed many vacations.

At Chicago, Marilyn Szczytowski, 3, her sister, Geraldine, 10, and Herbert, 6, were sad yesterday. Their father, Rudolph, told police how the sinister predictions of a fortune teller caused their mother to shoot and kill Irene Kirstein, 26. The same seer told the two women, at different times, that between each and her happiness stood another woman.

Franco-British Security Talks Open Monday

Reich's Role in European Peace Scheme to Be Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 24.—British and French diplomats will meet Monday to discuss German policies outlined in the Hitler-Halifax conversations and to determine the future of the British-French collective security policy.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, carefully guarding the aims Chancellor Hitler laid before Viscount Halifax, indicated he would make them known to France when Premier Camille Chautemps and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos come to London.

"No Pledges Given."

Chamberlain told the House of Commons that recent talks in Germany were "confidential," and declined to discuss them beyond saying that "no pledges have been given."

"I am satisfied, however," he said, "that the visit has been valuable in furthering the desire, which I believe to be generally felt in both countries, for the establishment of closer mutual understanding."

The feeling persisted in diplomatic quarters that Britain and Germany were further from a settlement than ever. It had been hoped at least that the German foreign minister, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, would come to London to continue the discussions.

Halifax gave the cabinet a report on his conversations in Germany at this morning's meeting.

Hope for Settlement.

Informed quarters said the British-French meeting probably would result in a statement expressing hope for a European settlement which would include Germany, but would make it clear that Britain and France would not be dictated to by anyone.

The British-French policy of collective security based upon the League of Nations was said by informed sources to have been challenged by Hitler's demands, one of which diplomats said was that Germany be given a free hand to obtain the return to the Reich of her national minorities in Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Informed quarters said Britain's action in seeking French co-operation clearly indicated that the British had no intention of giving up their French alliance to gain the support of Germany.

2 Racketeers Sought In Cafe Owner's Death

Revere, Mass., Nov. 24 (U.P.).—Police sought an East Boston racketeer and a Revere numbers operator for questioning in the slaying of Louis Gaeta, 44, Tuesday in what was believed a renewal of racket rivalry in this Boston suburb.

Gaeta was felled by five revolver bullets after being called from his cafe, which he had planned to open Thanksgiving Eve, by one of three men in an automobile.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Nov. 24.—Efforts of the Brussels Conference to end the undeclared war in the Far East were thrown back tonight to direct exchanges between the world's capitals.

The conference was adjourned indefinitely after adopting a declaration condemning the use of armed force in disputes between nations, and uring that hostilities between Japan and China be suspended.

May Be Called Anew.

Arrangements were made for recall of the conference whenever its chairman or two members have reported that they consider that its deliberations can be advantageously resumed."

Norman H. Davis, head of the United States delegation, stressed in the closing session the importance of continuing "earnestly and actively" the search for a peaceful settlement of the Oriental conflict. He said he was going home for that purpose to consult his Government.

Denies Issue Is Closed.

Davis declared the suspension of the conference sessions did not "in any sense signify that the problem we have been considering is to be dropped or that our interest in its solution is to be in any way lessened. We have put on record and made available to the world approbations of a common view and declarations of a common attitude."

The British and French delegations supported Davis' remarks, asserting their governments were ready to join with other countries in any move that could bring a peaceable solution to the conflict.

Health Center Completed.

France Links Defense Aides To Revolt Plot

Retired Aviation General Is Seized, Home Searched; Naval Officer Held.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 24.—The government's search for plotters accused of conspiring to establish a royal dictatorship in France spread today to retired officers of the national defense force.

While retired Naval Commander Joseph Le Maresquier and Sergt. Aviator Cheron were held for questioning, Surete Nationale inspectors searched the home of retired Aviation Gen. Edouard Duseigneur. They took the general to headquarters for examination.

He previously had been questioned concerning activities of Les Cagoulards ("the hooded ones") under investigation since mid-September and now believed by the authorities to have been linked with the dictatorship plot.

More Arrests Promised.

The Surete did not disclose the results of the search of the general's apartment, but said there would be a large number of arrests within the next few days.

The government ordered the Surete to use all resources to crush the secret revolutionary group which Minister of Interior Marx Dormoy announced last night had plotted to turn France into a dictatorship under a king.

All government police units were co-operating in the nation-wide search for arms caches of the organization and to determine who were the leaders and where the money came from to buy large supplies of arms.

Operatives pored over plans seized yesterday in a Paris loan office in which agents said Eugene Deloncle, a prominent consulting engineer, was interested.

The Surete Nationale announced the name of the plotters' organization was "CSAR," the initials for "Comite Secret d'Action Revolutionnaire." An arm band bearing a white fleur-de-lys on a blue background, the royalist emblem, also was found.

Deloncle left the country before the plot was exposed, and an official order was issued for his detention if he should return. He had been a consulting engineer at the Penhoet Shipyards at St. Nazaire, birthplace of many of France's greatest warships.

The air force, of which Gen. Duseigneur is a retired officer, long has been criticized as a stronghold for sympathizers with nationalist movements, such as Col. Francois de la Rocque's now-banned Croix de Feu.

Student Strikes Spread In Austrian Colleges

Innsbruck, Austria, Nov. 24 (AP). Police today scattered striking Innsbruck University students any other disturbers as student strikes spread over Austria. Authorities said the strikes have taken on a political character with the Nazis grasping the opportunity to agitate. Police arrested 54 studens a Vienna and 20 in Graz.

New Economic Council Is Created at Moscow

Moscow, Nov. 24 (AP).—The appointment of a new vice commissar of defense and creation of an economic council were announced today.

The announcement came simultaneously with a speech by Michael Kalinin, president of the all-Russia central executive committee, in which he emphasized the need of efficiency in wartime.

E. A. Schadenko, former chief political commissar at the Kiev army headquarters, was appointed vice commissar of defense.

Anarchist Asks Aid.

Los Angeles, Nov. 24 (U.P.).—Marcus Graham, self-styled "philosophic anarchist," said tonight he has invited Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to join a committee he has formed to oppose his deportation. Graham is editor of an anarchist publication entitled Man.

Killing Ethiopians 'Magnificent Sport,' Says Il Duce's Son

Rome, Nov. 24 (U.P.).—War is the "quintessence of beauty," Vittorio Mussolini, youthful aviator-son of Premiere Benito Mussolini, assures Italian youth in his book on Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, which was put on sale today.

Young Mussolini describes his seven-month service bombing Ethiopians as a period of "magnificent sport."

The whole of the book is devoted to the "beauty of war."

Describing a bombardment of Ethiopian Galla Cavalry a few days before Christmas, 1935, he writes:

"We arrived upon them unobserved an immediately dropped our loads of explosives . . . I remember that one group of horsemen gave me the impression of a budding rose as the bombs fell in their midst. It was exceptionally good fun and they were easy to hit as we were not high up. They offered a perfect target."

Cannon Again Batter Madrid, Killing Scores

City Undergoes One of Worst Shellings After Month of Quiet.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 24.—After more than a month of comparative quiet, Madrid was battered for over an hour tonight in one of the worst shellings of the war.

Scores were believed killed and injured in the furious artillery duel which filled Madrid's streets with a continuous roar of explosions. Government guns answered. All parts of the city were affected. Thousands of Madrilenos huddled sleeplessly in spots of refuge.

More than 1,200 shell bursts were counted.

Above the cannon roar came the noise of hard fighting in the University City sector.

First reports said the insurgents had launched a heavy attack.

This deadly show came the one night this year when the American Government was represented here by a diplomatic officer. Walter Thurston, counsellor of the American Embassy, arrived today. After a few shells burst near the embassy, he retired with other inhabitants of the building to the basement. Thurston planned to remain for Thanksgiving.

Eight Drift Hours In Airliner at Sea

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, Nov. 24 (AP).—Eight passengers today told of a harrowing experience yesterday when a Pan-American amphibian plane was forced down and drifted five hours in a rough sea off the coast of Venezuela.

The passengers included one American, Antonio Garcia, of Miami, Fla. The plane was forced down 20 minutes after leaving Port-of-Spain for Colombia, and was adrift until noon when rescue boats arrived.

9th Poison Victim.

Tucumcari, N. Mex., Nov. 24 (AP).—An unsuspected participant in a fatal funeral luncheon a week ago died today, the ninth victim of botulism-food poisoning that killed eight persons here last week. The ninth victim was Mrs. Siberio Gomez, Littlefield, Tex.

Used 5 Children As Shield, Says Harlan Witness

Ex-Deputy Tells of Flight at Perjury Trial of Coal Mine Boss.

How he placed two of his five children at the windows of his automobile to prevent any "shootings" as he fled from "bloody" Harlan County was described in District Court yesterday by Richard Tackett, emaciated former deputy sheriff.

Tackett, who took the witness stand to accuse Ted Creech, burly coal mine boss of perjuring himself before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, said he was forced to leave the county and ordered "not to return."

During cross-examination, the character of Tackett, a former convict, was attacked by Defense Attorney William E. Leahy, and the little gray-haired witness repeatedly replied, "I don't know" and "I disremember."

Leahy tried to learn where Tackett is now living. Assistant United States Attorney David Pine, conducting the prosecution, objected, and a hurried conference at the bench with Justice Joseph W. Cox followed.

"Is there any reason why you want to withhold the location of your present residence?" inquired Justice Cox.

"Yes, sir; there sure is," Tackett replied.

Pine then indicated the witness feared violence at the hands of Harlan County gunmen, against whom he had testified. It was at this point that Tackett revealed the circumstances of his flight with his children.

Reading from Senate committee records, Leahy showed that Tackett had admitted taking part in a plot to dynamite the home of a Harlan coal miner, but earlier, before a Kentucky jury, had denied knowledge of the affair.

"I want to show this jury," thundered Leahy, "that the Senate committee—when they put Tackett on the stand—knew I didn't have an ounce of credibility."

The perjury charge against Creech was based on a reported conversation he held with Tackett in a Senate Office Building corridor during the special investigation of conditions among Harlan County coal operators.

Creech allegedly threatened Tackett with "eight or ten years" in jail for "getting the coal operators in trouble." Later, when called to testify before the committee, Creech said Tackett admitted he was drunk and "didn't know what he was talking about."

Describing the corridor incident, Tackett said:

"I walked up the hall with Robert Bonham (a United States Deputy Marshall who had the witness in custody) and I saw Henry Lewis, a Harlan County jailer. I wanted to see Lewis, and Bonham let me go over and talk to him.

"I went over to him and asked how things were. We said a few more words and Creech stepped up and said 'I know you, we've been on several jobs together. You're up here making trouble for the Harlan cal operators and when we get back to Harlan I'll see that you get 8 to 10 years for it.'

Tackett said he answered "I don't know you" and was immediately shoved into the hearing room by Bonham.

Bonham subsequently notified members of the Senate committee and Creech was called to explain. It was then he told of Tackett's alleged addmission of intoxication.

Earlier in the Creech trial, however, Bonham testified that Tackett made no such statement.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

In this embattled Capital of the Republic, today's Thanksgiving holiday falls with something of the lull in a family quarrel between husband and wife about their children. Some of the oratory in Congress the last ten days has been enough to spoil an American's appetite for his turkey.

* * * *

It's the sort of a lull often accompanied by the unspoken thought:

"What have we been fighting about? We're after the same thing!"

But contrition, alas, is a rarer quality among the statesmen than among wives and husbands.

* * * *

This is a technical tumult, the noise on the Hill so obliquely aimed at the White House. It can be expressed in such cozy family phrases as:

"You always try to boss me!"

"Why don't you listen to reason?"

"You never appreciate a thing I do!"

* * * *

"You treat me like a doormat under your feet!"

"But you don't understand the children the way I do."

"This time I'm going to have MY way!"

* * * *

And occasionally there's a low growl that sounds like "You always grab all the white meat!"

The White House thinks that if it can keep quiet long enough maybe the whole thing will blow over . . . Just like a husband.

"—like a fat man in terror"

In any other land the bumper crops alone would be cause for a triple holiday, with hosannas, fireworks, paeans, parades, libations, laudations, genuflections and dancing in the streets. Not to mention our other blessings.

* * * *

For there are many reasons for Thanksgiving . . . The President has recovered from his toothache . . . Not one Congressman has lost his voice . . . We don't suffer from the "20 per cent fat shortage" that afflicts the Reich . . .

* * * *

We don't pay 66 cents a gallon for gasoline, as they do in Rome, nor $1.25 for a pound of baloney, as in Moscow, nor wear straw underpants, as in Berlin . . . Surely these are reasons for thanksgiving!

* * * *

But tomorrow's bellyache will be worse than yesterday's . . . This country is afflicted with gout and thinks it's suffering from anemia.

* * * *

Nor have we yet been regimented to the point where we can be fined $300 for walking less than 2 miles an hour or driving less than 10 m. p. h. across a bridge, as in Victoria, B. C. . . . That's something to be thankful for.

* * * *

Yet, as a nation, we are like a fat man in a state of unreasonable terror . . . Such a fat man can sit down today to an excellent meal of turkey or meat loaf or fried mush, but it is doubtful that he can do it in a proper mood of thanksgiving.

"who's afraid of the big bad wolf?"

An unarmed man can walk around Dupont circle with a fair degree of safety . . .

So far no inkwells have been thrown in the Senate—perhaps because there are none loose. . . .

The leftovers from the average Washington dinner today would feed a fascist family for a week.

We have much to be thankful for.

* * * *

No mobs have invaded the sanctity of the Union League Club. . . .

The Communists have made no move to pre-empt the 1925 F Street Club, haven of the rugged individualist in Washington.

For every ache we suffer there are 100 pills in the corner drug store. . . .

Our gratitude should know no limits . . .

* * * *

We are producing too much food, but no one is forced to eat six meals a day . . .

There's plenty of bicarbonate of soda for economic royalists who get nervous heartburn from overeating and overtaxation. . . .

O Lord, how thankful we are—if our hands would only stop trembling!

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 24.—To provide needed funds for continuing their clinic and nutrition program for underprivileged babies of Waynesboro, members of the Kiwanis Club gave a benefit dance at Brocks's Tavern tonight. Members of a special arrangements committee were Walter Hickok, John Smith, Dr. A. M. MaLoughlin, R. C. Webb, Capt. E. P. Childs and George Brown.

1,100 Clerks Begin Task of Sorting, Counting And Analyzing Cards in Unemployment Tally

Harris & Ewing.

Counting of the returns from the millions of unemployed census questionaires sent out last week was begun yesterday. This is a general view of the first floor of the warehouse in which data were compiled.

Nation Starts Christmas Seal Sale Tomorrow

70,000 Letters Sent Out in District Appeal to Citizens.

With President Roosevelt urging "the aid of every American," the sale of Christmas Seals, the income from which goes to combat tuberculosis, will begin tomorrow throughout the United States and its possessions.

In Washington, 70,000 letters enclosing seals and an appeal from Dr. James G. Townsend, president of the District Tuberculosis Association, are already on their way to local citizens.

The appeal asks that seals be bought at one cent each, and also outlines the work of the association, including the summer camp for tuberculous children, the free children's clinic, free X-ray examinations for high school students, help for adult patients recovering from the disease and free health talks and information.

In his proclamation urging aid, President Roosevelt declared that "the splendid service" of the National Tuberculosis Association "must be continued without curtailment."

"We must wage with increased vigor our fight to eliminate this plague as one of the greatest foes to health," the President said. "We must not in any way abate the fight against so appalling a scourge which claims a very large number of its victims from our young people between the ages of 15 and 30.

"A renewed and intensified program must be put into effect. Attention must be focused to protect the health of our young men and women whether in high schools and colleges or among skilled or unskilled industrial workers. We must guard with the utmost vigilance the health of all."

Nichols Doubtful Of Airport Action

Little prospect for House action on the Camp Springs airport bill in the special session was seen yesterday by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a member of the Washington Airport Commission.

"So long as the leaders adhere to the policy of considering only the administration program or emergency measures," he said, "I'm afraid we won't get a chance. However, I haven't given up hope."

Nichols was asked by the commission to do what he could to get the bill called up in the House. The measure passed the Senate last session.

Machines Will Record Data Supplied by Jobless of U. S.

For 1,100 clerks who yesterday started the job of sorting unemployment census returns, cards will never again be a form of recreation. It will take them six weeks to edit the unemployment cards and transfer the information in code form to other cards, and when it's all over even 13 cards will just be cards to them.

The workers, 75 per cent of whom are women, work in two eight-hour shifts in space which has been rented in a garage at 1701 Kalorama road northwest. Long tables accommodating about 200 have been placed on each of the two top floors of the building.

The first cards arrived yesterday from New Jersey, and more are due today. No announcement of the number of cards returned will be made until the formal report is given to Congress next session.

The preliminary job is the editing of the cards. Chief Statistician Fred A. Gosnell, of the Bureau of the Census, who supervises the Kalorama road figure factory, explained yesterday that this step facilitates the work of the card punchers in transferring the information from the original blanks.

For instance, some of the unemployed persons overlooked the squares provided for check marks and wrote their answers out. The editor's job is to put the check in the proper place where it can be seen more quickly.

Many persons wrote at one place on their cards that they are totally or partially unemployed, yet stated that they are doing WPA work. Here the editor must fix up the inconsistency.

On one card received yesterday was a note to the unemployment officials explaining that, while the sender has a job, he doesn't like it very well and would be glad to exchange it for another.

After the editing process, the cards are arranged by areas and fed into a machine which counts and numbers them. They are then ready for the card punchers. Nearly 400 operators of these machines will start work within 10 days.

The workers, who are residents of Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland, have Civil Service ratings. Some get $12.40 a week, others $14.60.

After total unemployment figures have been estimated by states and cities, the cards will be reshuffled and dealt out by occupations.

C. M. Shepperson Dies in Baltimore

Charles Marsh Shepperson, 30-year-old son of Charles M. and Dolly Peyton Shepperson, of 907 Prince street, Alexandria, died yesterday in Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore, following an operation.

Born in Alexandria, he obtained his early education in the public schools of the city and was graduated from the Alexandria High School in 192-. Four years later he was an honor graduate in the class of 1928 at the Virginia Military Institute.

In 1928 he accepted a position with the Che: peake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia. He was for a number of years traffic inspector with headquarters in Salisbury, Md.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow with the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, officiating. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Whitlow Held For Grand Jury In Girl's Death

Sheriff Testifies Suspect Changed Story After Confession.

By the Associated Press.

Appomattox, Va., Nov. 24.—John S. Whitlow, 32, was held for the grand jury today after witnesses at a preliminary hearing testified that Whitlow declared at first he shot pretty Ocie Turner, 22, last Thursday night, and then later insisted she killed herself.

Trial Justice L. F. Ferguson held Whitlow for the December grand jury, and over the protest of Commonwealth's Attorney Watkins Abbitt, Bail Commissioner C. W. Smith renewed Whitlow's $5,000 bond.

Sheriff J. L. McKinney and Burnett Smith, a filling station operator, testified that Whitlow first stated he shot Miss Turner after the body of the young woman was found last Thursday in a tourist cabin near here. Whitlow later changed his statement, the witnesses said, and maintained that Miss Turner shot herself.

Dr. D. A. Christian, physician, called to the cabin when investigation of a pistol shot led to the discovery of the body, said he found the young woman dead of a bullet wound in the head and a pistol near her hand. He said there were powder burns about the wound.

Marshal Subdues Three Attackers Till Police Come

Three colored men were charged with assault and interference with a Federal officer late yesterday after a free-for-all during which United States Deputy Marshal Gordon B. Greene was beaten.

Despite the fact the three men, one armed with a can, attacked him, Greene managed to subdue his assailants and hold them until police arrived.

The fight started when Greene, with an agent from an automobile finance company, attempted to repossess an automobile from William E. Tatum, colored, 30, of 231 Florida avenue northwest. The car was parked in the 1700 block Seventh street northwest.

The men charged were Tatum, his brother James, 35, of the Florida avenue address, and Joseph A. Jackson, colored, 25, of 1408 L street northwest. They were held by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage for the grand jury under $3,000 bond each.

Chest Toilers To Spurn Rest On Holiday

New Campaign Battles Mapped on Several Fronts in Drive.

of the crippled boy and his brother on the front page of Wednesday's Post, increased her contribution by $500. Two corporations volunteered a 10 per cent increase. A dozen or so gifts, ranging from $1 to $50, were received, and many persons called to ask that a solicitor be sent to see them.

At least several thousand potential givers, it was pointed out, have not been reached by the Metropolitan workers; more than 20,000 Government workers have not yet pledged; a large number of residents of the suburbs have not given, and between 40 and 50 firms in the group solicitation unit have not reported.

Policemen Enlisted.

The holiday form of the drive was shaped by these developments:

John W. Rustin, chairman of the speakers unit, arranged to have a place made for the Chest at each of 20 union church meetings today.

Every policeman on duty from 8 this morning until midnight was enlisted. Officers were supplied with pledge cards. Residents who have been overlooked in the campaign or who wish to make an additional contribution are assured that a policeman will call for their money within an hour after they phone police headquarters, National 4,000.

At a meeting of his chairmen, Richard W. Hynson, head of the special assignment unit, ordered a canvass of the unit's field in the larger gift brackets to see if additional funds could be raised.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Wayne Chatfield Taylor, chairman of the Government unit, meantime sent a special letter to each of his division chairmen urging the key people to go back to their departments, bring them up to quota, if possible, see every person who has not yet been afforded opportunity to pledge, and, where the quota has been reached, to ask for cash contributions toward the emergency fund.

Partial List of Gifts.

Gifts of $100 or more reported yesterday: $2,100, Woodward & Lothrop (additional pledge); $2,000, Arcade Sunshine Laundry and employes, Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy Co.; $800, Potomac Electric Power Co.; $750, S. Inter-American 'Escadrille' Flies Here on Goodwill Jaunt

Woman Pilots One of Five Planes in Courtesy Call at Pan-American Union; Chapter in Every Capital Is Group's Aim.

A pretty little lady with black hair and black eyes flew her own plane here yesterday on a mission of good will to aid the cause of peace in the Americas.

She is Senora Hermelinda U. Briones, Ecuadorean aviatrix, who came to Washington as the pilot of one of five planes of the Inter-American Escadrille. They made the journey from New York to pay a courtesy call on the governing board of the Pan American Union.

Senora Briones, who has lived in the United States about ten years, specializes in cross-country flying. She has already made nonstop flights from New York to Montreal, Canada, and from New York to Miami, Fla.

At present Senora Briones said she is planning a flight from New York to the Dominican Republic, but as yet has set no date for the venture.

Since conquering the difficulties of landing an airplane, Senora Briones declared she found flying in high altitudes most trying. She remarked that her recent flights at Mexico City were among the "trickiest" she has ever made. The airport at the Mexican capital, she pointed out, is 7,000 feet above sea level.

Even more strenuous flying is encountered in her own country of Ecuador, because the great Andes mountain lie athwart the air routes between the inland and seacoast cities, she added.

Senora Briones said she hopes to become a professional pilot in this country. Pointing out that professional flyers have to be citizens of the United States, she declared she hoped to fly to her own country and, therefore, had not yet decided to become a naturalized citizen here.

Accompanying Senora Briones on the flight here were Alfredo de los Rios, of Chile, commander of the escadrille; Capt. Eduardo Laborda, of Cuba, technical adviser; Nicolas Veloz, of Venezuela; Rene Blandon and Carlos Monterrey, of Nicaragua; Francisco Pares, of Puerto Rico; Manrique Alvarez, of Costa Rica; Luis Restrepo, of Colombia; Bolivar Agramonte and Roberto River, of Cuba, and Luis de Leon, of Guatemala.

The plane bearing the Nicaraguans flew directly to Baltimore from New York before proceeding to Washington. The other four planes landed en route at Trenton and Camden, N. J.; Wilmington, Del., and Baltimore.

Members of the escadrille expresed hope of organizing a squadron of 21 planes, one from each of the American republics, to tour all countries which are members of the Pan American Union, and organize a local chapter of the escadrille in the capital of each.

D. C. Buying Transit Co. Held Unlikely

Sen. King Emphatically Refuses to Support Plan at Present.

Proposed Government operation of street railways and buses in Washington will find little support on Capitol Hill, it was indicated yesterday after it had been suggested at a mass meeting in protest against the recent fare order.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, said he is emphatically opposed to such a step, mainly on the ground that the Government should stay out of private business.

"Why, look at the mess the railroads got in when they were taken over by the Government during the war," he said.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, declined to comment until he has completed his examination of data on the Capital Transit Co., furnished him by the Public Utilities Commission.

He expressed the opinion that the House sub-committee inquiry will not be resumed before the regular session of Congress, as this study will require several more weeks.

Meanwhile, a new maximum fare of 5 cents was proposed by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who said he will introduce a bill to so limit street car and bus charges. Schulte is a member of the House District Committee.

The Dirksen bill to fix the maximum fare at 7 cents is already before the committee.

Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee was out of the city, but he has previously stated that he could find no fault with the commission order and believed the District agency in a better position than Congress to determine the matter.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, a member of the committee, said he has not investigated the fare controversy or seen the order, but he recalled that a similar situation arose in Baltimore some time ago.

"The street railway company offered to compromise on a lower token fare," he said, "but some people took the matter to court, and the court allowed the company a straight 10-cent fare. That's what we have now."

District officials discounted the proposal that the District government might buy the Capital Transit Co.'s equipment and operate the railway.

"Where could we possibly get the $23,000,000 (the lowest possible valuation, according to the Public Utilities Commission) to make the purchase?" one official asked.

He pointed out that the District is having a hard enough time balancing its own budget without increasing taxes again.

Ex-Omaha Officer Is Given New Post

Lieut. Comdr. Edgar R. Winckler, navigator of the cruiser Omaha which ran aground in the Bahamas last July, yesterday was assigned to the battleship New oYrk as damage control officer.

Found guilty of "suffering a vessel of the Navy to be stranded through negligence" in connection with the beaching of the Omaha, Winckler was recently dropped 72 numbers on the promotion list by a Navy court martial.

Capt. Howard B. Mecleary, also convicted by a court martial and reduced 25 numbers, has been ordered to duty at eParl Harbor, T. H.

Both assignments become effective in January.

Stage Play Is Made Into Ace Camera Drama

By Nelson B. Bell

"STAGE DOOR." RKO-Radio film version of the stage play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, adapted to the screen by Morrie Ryskind and Anthony Veiller, costarring Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers, with Adolphe Menjou, Gail Patrick, Constance Collier, Andrea Leeds, Samuel S. Hinds, Lucille Ball, Franklin Pangborn, William Corson, Pierre Watkin, Grady Sutton, Frank Reicher, Phyllis Kennedy, Eve Arden, Ann Miller, Margaret Early, Jean Rouverol, Elizabeth Dunne, Norma Drury, Katherine Alexander, Ralph Forbes, Mary Forbes and Hunley Gordon. Directed by Gregory La Cava. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon, at RKO-Keith's Theater.

Stripped of its largely specious Hollywood satire and converted into a definite comedy-drama of the aspirations, hopes, rivalries and disappointments that punctuate the lives of the ambitious young women seeking stage fame from the "madhouse" of Mrs. Orcutt's "Footlights Club"—a tawdry theatrical boarding house in New York's turbulent Fifties—it becomes a play of roistering fun, delicate pathos and impressive dramatic power.

Without the stage comedy's straining for exaggerated contrasts between the living theater and ephemeral glory of triumph in the films, the new "Stage Door" visualizes a unified and engrossing story of believable young women engaged in a logical and convincing struggle for recognition behind the footlights. Nothing of the inherent hilarity reposing in the friendly belligerence of some 40 embryonic Bernhardts has been sacrificed to the more stable dramatic substance that has been written into the picture's script by Morrie Ryskind and Anthony Veiller. It has, rather, been given a new and fresher significance by the rationalization of its sources. Dramatic forcefulness has been tremendously enhanced by the same revision of the play's mood and spirit without impairment of its brisk and breezy tempo.

Plot Centers in Three.

The screen version of the piece has been given a directness of attack and a sharpening of character by making the principal figures in the action a young socialite, suddenly endowed with a deep-seated determination to amount to something on her own, despite the protests of a rich and indulgent father; a happy-go-unlucky gal in quest of any kind of a stage job—a night club even will do in a pinch—and a young actres who has scored a hit a year before the story opens, but now is reduced to a state of penniless and tragic hope that another similar opportunity will spring up before it is too late. Surrounding these three are a diversified group of serious and frivolous youngsters, eager for any chance on the stage; admiring "boy friends," a great theatrical producer and his quaint butler, Mrs. Orcutt, the boarding-house keeper; a former Shakespearean actress, now reduced to "coaching"; a comic slavey and all of the other amusing figures to be found huddling in the heart of Broadway's theater district.

The exceptionally long cast has been selected with rare discretion and reveals more than one surprise. In the role of Terry Randall—and this is not one of the surprises—Katharine Hepburn reverts to the full effectiveness and charm that she first disclosed upon the screen in "Morning Glory." Her perfomance is one of her best and typifies a sort of heroism on the star's part, since she makes use of a scene from her ill-fated stage play of "The Lake" to demonstrate first what an actress should not do and then, under the spur of a great grief, how the scene should be done to move an audience to cheers and her name into electric lights. No less completely excellent is Ginger Rogers' portrayal of the role of Joan Maitland, the girl who mistakenly takes the "easiest way" to achieve success, is disillusioned and then flashes also into an embodiment of genuine and sincere emotion. Miss Rogers is as competent an actress as she is superlative dancer.

All Share in Glory.

Sharing honors with these two is Andrea Leeds, a comparative newcomer to roles of importance, who imbues the tragic character of Kay Hamilton, the actress driven to fatal desperation, with ethereal beauty and a gentle and resigned pathos that lend the new edition of the play the basis of its emotional climax. Adolphe Menjou, as the producer, brings an entirely new note to the dramatic elements of the drama, and Constance Collier, as always, is splendid as the passe star of classic memory. Gail Patrick, Lucille Ball, Frank Reicher, and, in fact, all those named in the small-type paragraph preceding these comments, share generously in the skillful distribution of both lines and situations that constantly bubble with frothy and frolicsome fun.

Director Gregory La Cava has maintained a marvelously even pace in the handling of his multitude of characters and the film is both appropriately set and expertly photographed.

A new issue of "The March of Time," dealing as usual with timely and thoughtful subjects, a cartoon comedy and a new issue of the Pathe News are the complementary features of a major attraction of universal appeal and serve an important purpose in rounding out the finest entertainment RKO-Keith's has housed in months.

Socialite Actress Is in Film Ranks

An extra girl today set a precedent when she refused a speaking part in a motion picture.

Ralph Murray, directing "Night Club Scandals," spied her among the extras sitting at tables in a swank night scene and attracted by her poise and dark beauty, suggested that she play a small part, explaining that she could draw a salary of $20 a day instead of the usual $10 for dress extras.

"I'd rather not," she said, "please give it to some more deserving girl."

It was later revealed that the young woman is Elizabeth Cook, a society beauty from Oklahoma City, who had joined the extra ranks for a lark.

Sons of Famous Actors Find Going Rough on Road To Independent Achievement on Stage and Screen

IT is not so easy being the acting son of a father famous on the stage.

Two instances in proof will spring to any mind reasonably concerned with the theater of a past generation or two and the present. They are Tyrone Power and Keenan Wynn, the one the son of a distinguished classic actor; the other the male child of a great contemporaneous—and extemporaneous comedian.

BELL.

The elder Tyrone Power, during his lifetime, was one of the stage's most vigorous and most forceful actors, with an imposing presence and a booming voice. He left an inevitable and priceless heritage to his son—a natural inclination to adopt the theater as a career and the histrionic equipment with which to make his ambition come true. But getting started, without flagrantly trading on the name he bears and the earlier distinguished achievement behind the footlights which it represents, was a matter of some complexity. After a few comparatively meager Broadway efforts, Tyrone Power, fils, concluded that Hollywood was the proper place for him.

The junior Tyrone, I dare say, would be the first to tell you that "crashing" the Hollywood studios is no cinch. He dawdled around the outskirts of filmdom for many months, doing extra work or whatever presented itself—and very little did—finally reaching a belated conclusion that the Eastern seaboard was the likeliest place for budding thespians, after all. So he came back East and eventually hewed out a tiny foothold for himself, partially through his own efforts and ability and in part through the kindly intercession of friends influential in the playhouse. Hollywood had to cross the continent to secure the services of the lad who tried to peddle them at the studio doors for two or three years without ever being given even so much as an encouraging nod. When he went back it was with a contract.

And now look at him! Tyrone Power, on the screen at Loew's Capitol tomorrow as co-star again with Loretta Young, in "Second Honeymoon," is up in the Robert Taylor bracket as one of the cinema's top-ranking romantic young actors. And he did it practically on his own, in spite of, rather than because of, the reputation enjoyed by his father both on the stage and upon the screen.

Keenan Wynn, as yet, has not found the going quite so smooth. If he were content to follow in the footsteps of his father, Ed Wynn, currently starring in a new musical dido known by the tag of "Hooray for What?" and trade on his name and high repute as "the perfect fool," he would be "in," for the grandson of the noted actor, Frank Keenan, is himself a comedian of parts, can sing a bit and is a clever tap dancer.

It has been his choice, however, to get there the hard way. He insists on roles of serious import, preferring to emulate his grandfather and build a reputation on merit as an actor rather than to be a "funny man" and risk the charge of basking in his dad's reflected glory.

Keenan is not booked for any appearance in the Capital that this column is aware of at the present time, but may be recalled as a member of the cast of "Hey-Diddle-Diddle," a gay little thing that played the Belasco a season or two ago and was a good deal better than its backers thought or most of the Eastern critics said.

There are the second generations of the Francis X. Bushman, Fred Kohler, Jack Holt, Taylor Holmes and many other famous theatrical families who have been hindered rather than helped by being the sons of players who have compiled a luminous fame that the youngsters refuse to capitalize.

The moral of all this probably is that you can't be too careful in choosing your father, although Tyrone Power, for one, might tell you different.

So they went to work on "To Be Continued," almost before the final curtain hit the stage of the National Theater following Monday night's first performance on any stage. One learns from reliable sources that the Charles George comedy now is in process of being rewritten with a view to strengthening its dramatic structure and expanding its characters to more imposing proportions. The male characters in the play are being subjected to particular concentration and an entire new scene is being written for the attorney, the undertaker and the young clergyman, who are aspirants for the widowed hand of Pamela Pennington, the Freudian young mother played with such asperity by Luella Gear. Other alterations also are being made. It is to be gathered that the work on "To Be Continued" is to be continued until there emerges a play worthy of the talents that are engaged in it.

The Little Theater is up to its old tricks. It was only a short time ago that the tiny Ninth street house violated a long-standing policy of revival showings of ace pictures to present a first-run film starring Beniamino Gigli for a week's engagement. Now another old rule is to be tossed into the limbo by the first presentation of a foreign-language film on the Little screen.

Beginning Sunday, Maxim Gorki's "The Lower Depths," voted the best French film of 1936 by the Young Independent Critics of France, will have its Washington premiere. It is spoken entirely in the French tongue and has its scene laid in a "flop house," in which congregate the most degraded of human backwash.

The picture is at once tender and bitter and so clear in content and purpose as to persuade the Little management to ignore the matter of alien speech.

• • • •

It might be well to revise that slip you keep pasted in your hat to conform with the changes that occur today in the customary calendar of the theater. For instance, the midweek matinee at the National is being held on the holiday, instead of the habitual Wednesday. It also is to be noted that Thanksgiving matinees will be presented in all of the Warner Brothers neighborhood theaters, beginning at 1 p. m. "Alcatraz Island," at the Metropolitan; "Ali Baba Goes to Town," at the Columbia, and "The Firefly," having had a sell-out midnight preview last night at the Palace, also get going today on their regular week runs. Tomorrow there will be 1 p. m. mats at the Warners' Ambassador, Apollo, Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony, Home, Penn, Savoy and York theaters; 2 p. m., at the Calvert, Sheridan, Tivoli and Uptown.

• • • •

A couple of old-time Charlies are in town chasing "turkeys" around the more open spaces in a spirit of good, clean Thanksgiving fun. One of them is Charlie Schwerin, independent practitioner of the fillum trade, whose "The Dead March" recently was seen in the Capital as an Armistice week attraction; the other, Charlie Kranz, down from New York to take a gander—if you can do with a mixed poultry metaphor—at the Washington link in his chain of film exchanges. Today, of course, they are dedicating to gnawing a drumstick, washed down with a few ponies of fine old vintage beer!

• • • •

That reactionary memory insists upon recalling that it was exactly 482 years ago today that this column attended the old Columbia Theater to see Jess Dandy in "The Prince of Pilsen" at both the matinee and night performances. There was a musical comedy with as fine a score as ever was written—every song a hit tune that has come down even to the present-day music racks. "Haf you effer been to Zinzinnati?" Four hundred and eighty-two years is quite a hunk of time. Maybe it was only 382!

A-Stitch-in-Time Note.

Now is the time for all good men to find out where the little woman has hidden the bicarb bottle!

Featured in Holiday Week Bills

Real Proof.

Marjorie Weaver knows she's graduated from the "stock" actress ranks now. The diminutive brunette beauty has just inherited Loretta Young's ecru moire-decorated dressing room as a result of her portrayal of "Joy" in Miss Young's current Twentieth Century-Fox starring picture, "Second Honeymoon."

'Ebb Tide' Done Under Handicap

Hollywood writers, notoriously dissatisfied with their lot in life, took some comfort from the revlation that part of "Ebb Tide," produced in Technicolor, was dictated in sign language!

The disclosure was made by Mrs. Isobel Field, stepdaughter of Robert Louis Stevenson, who wrote "Ebb Tide" in Samoa. Mrs. Field was a visitor at Paramount, where she related many anecdotes concerning Stevenson and the South Seas adventure novel to Ray Milland, Frances Farmer and Director James Hogan.

During the writing of "Ebb Tide" Stevenson, according to Mrs. Field, became ill and was unable to write or even use his voice to any extent for many weeks. The stepdaughter, who often took dictation from "R. L. S." on his works, had learned the sign language of the deaf and dumb some years before.

So she taught Stevenson the symbols. He learned to use his hands fluently in a week, the woman stated, and then proceeded to "dictate" several chapters of "Ebb Tide" in the sign language!

Insurance appraisers last week valued "still' photographs from ancient and modern movies in the collection of Cecil B. DeMille at $147,000.

Hollywood's most valuable collection of its kind, it includes stills from all his pictures from the first, "The Squaw Man," to his last, "The Bucaneer," and traces the development of lighting, photography, sets and costumes.

The valuation was arrived at on the basis of $1 a print, an entire room in DeMille's Laughlin Park home being set aside for housing of the 147,000 pictures.

Quiet Girl.

Dull Reading.

Peter Lorre, one-man chamber of horrors, does not care for horror stories. They bore him.

Stage Stars Are Hired for Comedy

Seven former New York stage stars have principal roles in B. P. Schulberg's musical comedy, "Blossome on Broadway."

They include Edward Arnold, who in his youth, believe it or not, was a sylph-like leading man for such brilliants as Ethel Barrymore and Nazimova; Weber and Fields, John Arthur, Frank Craven, William Frawley and Rufe Davis.

12 P. M. "Well, it doesn't matter any more whether Magda de Fontanges is allowed into this country, or whether Pol. Com. Valentine permits her to work at the French Casino," an official confesses at that cafe which, until a few months ago, was the most successful cafe in America. "Because the French Casino has closed its doors. The show will be transferred to London. The place itself may be sold to Bob Goldstein, the theatrical agent, and Monte Prosser, its publicist."

1 A. M. Bobby Clark, of Clark & McCullough, reminisces at the Old Rumanian Cabaret. "But get this," reveals George Godfrey, who once was booking manager at the Palace, "E. F. Albee gave me hell one day for permitting one of the Palace acts to make one radio broadcast. Albee told me: 'I want you to put a clause in all contracts forbidding artists to work on the air. I'll put those damn radio companies out of business.'" . . . "The town's swankiest New Year's Eve ball will be given here by the Medical Bureau to Aid Spanish Democracy," an official states at the Waldorf. "Felix Frankfurter is one of the sponsors."

2 A. M. "Sam Behrman, who adapted 'Amphitryon 38,' invited Myron Selznick to see the show," one of his friends reveals at the Cotton Club. "Selznick asked, "'Amphitryon 38?' What is it—a submarine play?'" "Right near my place, in the Bronx," Jeweler Joe Hoffman reports at Le Mirage, "this Chinese place on Southern boulevard, called the Bamboo Village, has its own war with the Nikko, a Japanese place, which is starting to sell chow mein. It's become the Shanghai of the Bronx!"

3 A. M. "Do you remember asking my daughter, years ago, what she wanted for a present?" George Slocum, the British lecturer, asks Barney Gallant. "And you brought her some paint and an easel? Well, here she is—Alma Slocum, the famous British artist." . . . "Jack Chertok, head of M.-G.-M.'s shorts department, assigned Reggie LeBorg to do a short on the life of Handel, the composer," a Hollywoodite reveals at the Village Barn. "Chertok's memo to him was brief: 'Handel—with care.'" . . . "RKO offered Bill Robinson a pass into one of their theaters," an agent reports at Bill Bertolotti's. "So Bill turned it down, explaining: 'When I come into this theater I don't want to have to show a pass. I want to be recognized.'"

"Take it, it's lucky," he urges. "No, it isn't," Harris returns. "Don't forget—the poor rabbit had four of these." . . . "Look at Lucius Beebe," Jerome Zerbe states at El Morocco. "He's the best-dressed overdressed man in America." . . .

5 A. M. "These British newspapermen interviewed me and asked why I didn't win the Academy Award," William Powell laments at Reuben's. "I told them you can't tell about those things, just like you can't tell about politics or religion. So the next day the British papers headlined, 'Powell Says Politics Cost Him Academy Award'" . . . "I'm going 3,000 miles," Diana Ward sighs at Longchamps, "but I don't know in what direction. My husband, Jock Manly-Colgrove, wants me to join him in London. But George White took my screen-test back to Hollywood" . . . "All the critics raved about Koussevitzky's doing the Sibelius Symphony so well in Boston Thursday," one of his musicians confesses at Lindy's. "Not one of them knew that he had skipped four bars!" . . . "Did you know I'm officially a janitor?" Jack Wildberg, Ursula Parrott's husband, states. "I have my office in the Hathaway Building and live in the penthouse there. The building rules say that only the janitor can live in the building. So officially, I'm the janitor."

Theaters Offer Sterling Bills For Next Week

Holiday Bookings Cover Wide Range on Both Stage and Screen.

One of the most notable events of the season of living drama will be celebrated at the National Theater next week, beginning Monday night, when Maurice Evans will be seen in Shakespeare's long-neglected play of "King Richard II." The star, who already has been seen locally as Romeo to Katharine Cornell's Juliet and as Napoleon in "St. Helena," will be surrounded by a company of 40 players from the St. James Theater, New York, where his present vehicle was a sensational success both last season and this. Among the foremost in the cast will be Frederic Worlock, Lee Baker, Charles Dalton, A. G. Andrews, Lionel Hogarth, Winston O'Keefe, Donald Randolph, Rhys Williams, Eleanor Phelps, Irene Redrow, Betty Jenckes, Julia Lathrop and others. The production will be identical with that presented in New York. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

"The Firefly," which opened its engagement at Loew's Palace Theater with a midnight preview last night, continues the current attraction at that house with Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones the co-stars, supported by Warren William, Billy Gilbert, Douglas Dumbrille, Henry Daniell, Leonard Penn, Tom Rutherford, Belle Mitchell, George Zucco, Corbett Morris, Matthew Boulton and Master Robert Spindola. The story has been rewritten into a melodramatic romance of the Napoleonic wars in Spain and the production is one of the most sumptuous ever to emanate from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. While not in natural color photography, the film has been effectively tinted to add greatly to its picturesqueness. It is supplemented by short-reel subjects and "Events of the Day."

Grace Moore comes to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in her latest Columbia production, "I'll Take Romance," in which the principal male role is played by Melvyn Douglas, last seen on the same screen with Marlene Dietrich and Herbert Marshall in Ernst Lubitsch's "Angel." During the action of the play, Miss Moore sings a varied program of songs, ranging from operatic arias to a new ballad, bearing the title of the film, and "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain," of all things! On the stage, the vaudeville bill will be headlined by Gomez and Winona, "the royalty of dancedom," and will include Stan Kavanagh, juggler; Kirby and Duval and the Honey Family.

In "Second Honeymoon," opening as chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater, Loretta Young and Tyrone Power are co-starred again in a romantic comedy of the first rank. This Twentieth Century-Fox release is based on a story by Philip Wylie and was directed by Walter Lang. In the supporting cast are such favorite players as Stuart Erwin, Claire Trevor, Marjorie Weaver, Lyle Talbot, J. Edward Bromberg, Paul Hurst and Mary Treen. On the stage, the living entertainment will be supplied by Dave Apollon and his "Varieties of 1938" revue, in which a long list of specialty artists will participate, with Apollon as master of ceremonies. The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestra will complete the bill.

"Alcatraz Island," a story of "America's Devil Island," will come to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater today for an engagement of one week. The cast is headed by John Litel and includes, among others, Ann Sheridan, Mary McGuire, Dick Purcell, Gordon Oliver, Vladimir Sokoloff and Ben Welden. The story is packed with thrills and embodies a vigorous vein of romance. The bill is augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and full newsreel.

Beginning today and continuing through the ensuing week, Eddie Cantor will play a repeat engagement on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater in "Ali Baba Goes to Town," the Oriental satire in which he is supported by a long and distinguished cast, led by Roland Young. Many lilting musical numbers intersperse the comedy scenes.

What is described as one of the most penetrating documentary films ever made, Maxim Gorki's "The Lower Depths," will be presented for the first time in Washington as chief screen feature of the bill at the Little Theater for the week beginning Sunday. This subject is enacted by a foreign cast especially selected to shoulder the heavy task the film imposes upon them. Short subjects and newsreel will be added.

Heading the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, commencing tomorrow, will be a Lowell Thomas travelogue to Pitcairn Island. A release in the "Popular Science" series also will be shown. The bill will be completed by the usual newsreel coverage of the world and a selected list of cartoon comedy and novelty subjects.

Switching on its lights again yesterday, the Belasco currently houses a film bill featured by "The Love Life of a Gorilla," a sensational drama of bizarre life in the equatorial jungles. There is much of the savor of "Ingagi" in this item. Short-reel releases and newsreel complete the bill.

Ann Corio, the supreme beauty of the burlesque circuits, is announced as the stellar attraction at Jimmy Lake's Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the usual Sunday matinee. Miss Corio will be starred in "Floogi Street," Jack Diamond's new burlesque melange, and will be supported by a specially assembled company of comedians, singers and dancers, backed by a real beauty chorus.

Colored Bandit Escapes After $34 Holdup Here

Armed with a revolver, a colored bandit forced his way into the Howard Cleaners in the 3900 block of Fourteenth street northwest about 6:30 last night and compelled the manager to hand over $10 from the cash register and $24 from his own pockets.

Admiral's Wife Cooks Ham for Duke of Windsor

Harris & Ewing.

A few years ago Mrs. Mark Bristol, wife of the rear admiral, cooked a couple of hams for friends. The result was a lucrative business that involves the cooking in her kitchen on fashionable Massachusetts avenue of thousands of hams yearly. The hams are shipped to every corner of the earth. The Duke of Windsor is one of her best customers. Four days are required to prepare the ham according to the Bristol formula. It is soaked and simmered, baked and sprinkled with cloves, pineapple and basted with sherry, brandy or applejack. Mrs. Bristol (above) frequently inspects the ham while it simmers. Mamie, her first assistant ham cooker, holds the lid.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 24. — Settin' Around (Paramount): Filmville has a cast system as inflexible as that of India—and nowhere do you see it better demonstrated than in the average studio cafe. Today, lunching in the Paramount commissary, I noted that the place could be divided into four geographic—and social—sections. To the left of the main entrance eat the extras and the lowlier studio craftsmen—the grips, labor gang, etc. To the right of the main entrance sit the bit players. In the rear of the big room the tables are crowded with the white-collar workers from the front offices. The directors, ace writers and stars sit in magnificent secusion on the glassed-in veranda.

NEGRI.

The caste system was bad for India—and I think it is bad for Hollywood. Great pictures are not made by directors, stars and producers—they are the product of perfect collaboration among all of the people who work on them. A set designer's work may not be as apparent as that of the star, but it cuts a lot of ice when the general excellence of the picture is appraised. This town's snobbishness is based on salary. Unfortunately, salaries in Hollywood are very seldom based on merit. The technician who is working for $100 a week has ideas that the $5,000-a-week director ought to hear; many a script girl could give advice that would save a star's career. The Hollywood caste system can be blamed for many a Hollywood disaster.

Arrived on the set where Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper are co-starring in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" just in time to witness a torrid argument. Gary was refusing to play a scene in which he was to turn Claudette over his knee and give her a sound spanking. The director and Claudette were trying to break down his genteel impulses. Suddenly Claudette resorted to gestures. Smack! With a quick flip of her hand, she slapped Gary a resounding blow. "Now," said she, "turn about is fair play. Maybe Gary will agree to give me that spanking." Gary, half laughing, half mad, gave her a sweeping bow. "Madame," he said, "I withdraw all my objections—it will be a great pleasure!"

Set-visited with Dorothy Lamour, who has just started work in another tropical drama, "Her Jungle Love." For the umteenth time since she came to Hollywood, she is playing a dark-skinned native girl, clad in a string of shell beads, a brief sarong and her native charm. Chatting with her, I could not resist commenting on the smooth, even texture of the make-up on her body.

* * * *

"Make-up?" she repeated indignantly. "That's not make-up—that's me. Since Hollywood has decided to keep me in native girl roles, I've decided to take the path of easiest resistance. I spend an hour a day under the sun lamps—and save money on my make-up bills."

* * * *

Speaking of make-up reminds me that I was amazed when I visited the Bing Crosby set today to find that irreconcilable wearing grease paint for the first time in his screen career. Knowing that he has curtly refused to "paint" his face, I asked how come—and heard an amusing story. Seems that Harry Ray, the company make-up man, made him a sporting proposition. If San Francisco University, his school, beat Gonzaga University, Bing's alma mater, in their annual football game, Bing was to wear make-up throughout the picture. If Gonzaga won, Ray was to wear the grease paint. The final score was S. F. U., 7; Gonzaga, 0. And Bing is too much of a sport to renege on the wager.

Allen, Fleming Among 34 to Fight Paralyis

President Names Leaders in All Parts of Nation on New Board.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt announced last night selection of 34 trustees of the new National Foundation he helped organize to combat infantile paralysis.

The group, including officials and businessmen from all sections of the country, will start work soon on its first big task—arranging for the annual Presidential birthday balls on January 30. Proceeds from the paries wil be used in the campaign against the crippling disease.

Painter's Death In 7-Floor Drop Held Accident

Driver Whose Truck Was Caught in Rope Is Released.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night termed accidental the death of Oscar Vanover, 22-year-old painter, who plunged to his death from a scaffold on the seventh floor of an apartment house at 1746 K street northwest. No inquest will be held.

Dr. MacDonald's verdict released from police custody Victor H. Wolf, 127 Xenia street southeast, truck driver, who was held at the Third Precinct station.

Vanover was, jerked from the scaffold when a rope from the swinging platform caught in a double wheel on Wolf's truck. Feeling the pull of the rope on the truck, Wolf stopped, as Vanover's body landed in the alley.

Witnesses told police that the rope, used to pull the scaffold to the top of the apartment, was lying in the alley. The knot at the end became wedged between the tires.

The painter was employed by William M. Ernst, building contractors. Wolf was operating a truck owned by the Eagle Transfer Co.

9 Men Indicted For Looting of Drug Exchange

Four Washington druggists and five former employes of the Washington Wholesale Drug Exchange were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday for theft of thousands of dollars worth of drug supplies and sundries from the exchange in the past two years.

The druggists, Benjamin Bass, Charles M. Brown, Nathaniel Johnson and George W. Beasley, were indicted for receiving stolen property. The employes, Philip Nelson Newby, Jesse Frank Piper, Clarence W. Turner and Simon Kessler, were accused of larceny and receiving stolen property. John R. Gordon, former stock clerk at the exchange, was indicted for grand and petit larceny.

Moe Jacobs, a stockholder in the exchange, reported he purchased merchandise at a discount on the representation it came from a Baltimore wholesaler who was going out of business.

In another indictment, the grand jury charged Norman A. Genaro, a salesman, with embezzlement and larceny after trust. He is alleged to have taken $1,150 from Mrs. Emilie K. Wundrlich, 718 C street southeast, with which he was supposed to obtain her stock in a quicksilver organization. The stock was never given her, it was alleged.

A manslaughter charge against Edward D. Williams was ignored by the jurors, who held there was insufficient evidence with which to connect him with the death of Charles E. Kelly, 435 Fifteenth street southeast, who was killed in an automobile accident.

Those indicted were Simon D. Campbell, Marcus Johnson and Clyde W. Driskell, grand larceny; Benjamin Henderson, Clarence Coates and William Murray Rushing, robbery; James Avery, assault with intent to commit robbery; Clarence Emile Huck, assault with intent to commit rape (two charges); Norman A. Genaro, embezzlement and larceny after trust; Albert W. Krause, James H. McCormick, Lloyd T. Carter and James Fisher, housebreaking.

Slot Machines Too Tempting to 'Dicks,' Their Boss Charges

Two employes of a Hyattsville, Md., private detective agency were freed on bond yesterday on charges of breaking into slot machines in Jerry's hot dog stand in Colmar Manor, where they had been hired as guards.

In warrants issued by Justice of the Peace William A. Bobb, the guards were named as Earl Monrote, 46, of the 800 block G street southwest, and Irving E. Stewart, 25, of the same address.

The charges were brought by Thomas H. Garrison, head of the detective agency. Justice Bobb said he would hold a preliminary hearing, December 7.

The Washington Post Will Publish Its 60th Anniversary Edition On Monday, Dec. 6th

The Sixtieth Anniversary Edition, which will be published as a special section with The Post of December 6th, will give a complete picture of the changing scene in Washington. It will be historical, of course, but it will be more than that. It will record these sixty years, not from the viewpoint of the writer of a textbook for use in history classes, but as they were reflected at the time in The Washington Post.

Felix Morley, editor of The Post and Pulitzer Prize winner, will write the history of The Washington Post. Franklyn Waltman, head of The Post's national news bureau and winner of the Pugsley award as outstanding Washington correspondent, will write of political history as reflected in The Post. Miss Malvina Lindsay, woman's page editor and only woman ever awarded the Missouri School of Journalism medal, will write of what these sixty years have meant to women. Edward Folliard will cover the growth of the District of Columbia, Nelson Bell will write of the theater, Ray Brown of musical development, Hope Ridings Miller of society, Shirley Povich of sports, and dozens of other specialists will cover the progress of their various fields—churches, schools, science, literature—always as reflected in the day-to-days news brought to Washington for sixty years by The Post.

This is an edition which every Washingtonian will want to have, to read, to keep. Many will want to send it to friends in other cities, since every American is interested in the story of the Nation's Capital. The demand for copies will be great—assure yourself of your copy by reserving it in advance. Phone NAtional 4200 to place your subscription or to arrange about copies to be mailed to your friends.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Is Told That Willful Violation of Better Nature Is, Very Literally, Spiritual Death.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 37 years old and have been married 12 years and have four children. During the last half year my wife and I haven't been getting along very well together. The fact is, she caught me going with another girl, a girl I had fallen in love with and had been going with for some time before my wife learned about her. When she found out, she told me to go ahead with the other girl if that was what I wanted; but the fact is, I believe, that I love my children too much to wish to break up my home.

• • • •

I have thought the thing over, and it seems to me that if I stayed with my wife, I would want to go on seeing the other girl. But that makes an impossible situation, too. I can't stand much more of what I have been going through with; and would like some advice on how to do the best thing for all concerned. I hope you can help me. Yours truly, D. K.

• • • •

DEAR D. K. I wonder how long it would have taken you to make up your mind just which mattered most—your family or your extra-marital cake-eating—if your wife had been a little less long-suffering when she learned about the "other girl?" Not very long, I imagine. If she had put it up to you very sharply—"she or the children and myself"—I'll bet the other girl would have been dumped overboard out of your life, bag and baggage, in double-quick time. That is, of course, if you are capable of making decisions, acting on them and keeping bargains.

• • • •

If you love your children and are strongly desirous of playing a father's role in their life, I certainly advise you to give up your self-indulgent playing around. You're giving them a wretched example of conduct to look back on, when they attain to an age where they know what it's all about, as we say. And what you're doing to them, in the way of weak and wayward treachery, is not less damaging than what you're doing to the girl, to your wife, and to yourself.

• • • •

After a fortnight's well-nigh continuous, day-after-day discussion of this type of social problem—where husband or wife or unmarried person is drifting aimlessly into a tangled and morally vitiating sex relationship—I'm getting thoroughly out of patience with such animalistic irresponsibility. Everyone of you who write me about your problems of this sort know in your hearts you are doing wrong—to yourself and to those with whom your life is bound up. You know also (if you will face yourselves squarely) that the only right solution is to pull yourself up short on your primrose path of dalliance, and return to the higher—if rockier (though I doubt it, at that)—road of decent allegiance to duty. When you ask me what to do, you are hoping against hope that I may say the word which will let you off what you know you should do and must do, if you expect to find favor in your own sight.

• • • •

It's one thing to have a certain sympathetic understanding of and tolerance for mankind's primitive biological inheritance; but it's another thing to suppose this can be made a blanket excuse for men's and women's disgraceful and damning refusal to live up to the demands of their equally powerful, counter-balancing, socially developing spiritual consciousness.

• • • •

To live by selfish animalistic dictate rather than by a disciplinary social code is to kill—by indirection, by disuse of spiritual faculties—the very thing which makes men different fro mthe animals. The price of wilfully violating one's better nature is, very literally, spiritual death—and the day of reckoning doesn't wait upon a presumptive frying in hell for one's sins against himself and others. One pays the price while he still lives and moves and has his progressively stunted being. M. H.

The Formal Introduction.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to know if it is correct for one who lives very informally to make formal introductions. Also, what is the correct form for a formal introduction, and what is the best way to make an informal introduction? When leaving a party, do you take leave of everyone you have met while there? Any information you can give me on these points will be appreciated. UNSCHOOLED.

• • • •

DEAR UNSCHOOLED: Formal introductions, which employ the word "present," are reserved for formal occasions and truly distinguished company. One whose mode of living necessitates informal entertaining—and whose friends are more remarkable for their congeniality than for outstanding achievement—will probably have little, if any, occasion to use the formal introduction.

• • • •

The correct formal introduction is: "Mr. Distinguished, may I present Mr. Brown?" or, "Mrs. Distinguished, may I present Mr. White?" The younger person is always presented to the older or more distinguished person of the same sex; but a gentleman is always presented to a lady, even though he may be elderly and renowned and she a girl in her teens. The only exception to this applies to introductions to a royal personage, to a church dignitary or to the President.

• • • •

Informal introductions omit the word "present" and are negotiated in a casual, conversational manner. One may say, "Mrs. West, do you know Mrs. South?" or, "Mrs. South, this is Mrs. West," or, simply, "Mrs. South, Mrs. West." When introducing a man to a woman in such informal manner, one pronounces the lady's name first; just as one pronounces the name of the more distinguished or considerably older woman first, in introducing one woman or another. One might say, in introducing a man to a woman, "Mr. Broker, have you met Miss Smith?" but one never says: "Miss Smith, have you met Mr. Broker?"

• • • •

It depends entirely on the size of the party whether one says goodbye to every guest. If the party is small—yes. If the company is large, you take leave of your host and hostess and the honor guest, if any; and distribute other casual goodbyes en route to the exit. You don't make a point of hunting up everyone you've met, not even those you've most enjoyed. In fact, to do the latter is to discriminate against the others by implication. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

When the Young Idea Sprouts Artistically

This crude house, above, with few details, is representative of the first object with definite form that children three to four years of age usually paint.

Action pictures, similar to train at left, illustrates the third step in the development of young artists 6 to 8 years of age.

Children Two to Ten Taught By Art School in Silver Spring

Miss Alice Mendham, of Green Acre Project, Explains Development of Erstwhile Capacity Under Guidance of Instructors Who Give Pupils Free Rein.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

WHEN small children begin to scribble on the new wallpaper or smear vivid crayon marks on prized books and furniture, parents should refrain from the proverbial scolding or spanking, and instead should furnish materials and give the children a free reign for self-expression in art. This can be done either at home or in a nursery school.

This is the advice of Miss Alice Coe Mendham, who successfully conducts art classes for children 2 to 10 years of age at the Green Acre School in Silver Springs, Md. Before assuming the directorship of this school Miss Mendham was connected with the Little Red School House in New York City, having previously graduated from Barnard College. Later she studied psychology at the University of Minnesota and at the Sorbonne in Paris.

Children Start at 2.

By following the method of encouraged supervision, maintains Miss Mendham, children who begin early training in the arts are often able to paint pictures with beautiful forms and color by the time they are 12 or 13 years of age. And those who cannot paint well have greater appreciation for the paintings of others.

In the Green Acre nursery school children 2 years of age who desire to draw or paint are given large sheets of paper 2 feet by 3 feet, large crayons or an easel and big brushes. They paint in one of the primary colors, and are permitted to paint at their own inclination during specified hours. While the work of the 2-year-olds has no definite form and is little more than a smear, this first effort develops a wide, free stroke by constant use of the large muscles which are important in the more advanced stage of drawing. No directions or advice is given until the child seeks it.

"At 4 years of age the child's painting begins to take form," says Miss Mendham, as she explained the bold lines and smudges on the drawing sheets. "While the drawing means nothing to an adult it has distinct meaning for the child, for it is a story that the child tells to himself. For instance, he will say, 'This is a ship at sea, or this is a house.'"

A crude house is the first object that children draw with definite form, she explained. At first it is a boxed affair. Then gradually other details, such as windows, doors, flower garden and people around the house are added. The people are mostly stick figures with head, legs and elongated arms. Ship scenes are popular with all children. These are crude with no proportion and very few if any details. Even maps of the Potomac River are attempted. Animals, such as goats, pigs, horses, cats and fowl offer direct stimulation to children, particularly to those around the ages of 5 and 6 years.

Mix Paints at 6.

In tracing the children's development, Miss Mendham related that at 5 years of age they were given a tray of primary colors and a brush for each color. By the time they are 6 years old they begin to mix their own colors, and at 7 strive for lavender, brown and other shades that are difficult to obtain.

"Ships the children paint at 8 and 9 years of age," she continued, "differ from those of the younger children in that more details are included in the scene. They gradually shape the keel, add smokestacks, railing and lifesavers. More expression is given to the figures that are placed at various positions on the deck to represent passengers. And it is at this time the children begin proportion and perspective."

From time to time the pupils criticize each other's work and offer constructive suggestions. "For example," says Miss Mendham, "I have heard one child say to another, 'There's too much space at the top; it needs something else there; or there are too many things there—rub a tree off.'"

After working with paints and crayons children 8 and 9 years of age begin to experiment with colored chalks that give a lovely soft effect and a wide range of coloring, according to Miss Mendham, who suggests that automobiles, engines and other action pictures interest children more than landscapes and portraits until they begin dealing in perspectives.

Tools Also Used.

The Greenacre School gives courses in clay molding and music for those children who do not wish to paint, but still seek a medium of artistic self-expression. Children 2 years old begin by making snakes. Then gradually make birds' nests, ash trays and various forms of pottery as they advance.

"Children particularly enjoy working with clay," says Miss Mendham, "for they like to see concrete results of their efforts, and they like to make things that can be used at home. Then, too, this method has a great psychological value for the child in that he can strive for praise by pleasing his parents and friends as well as satisfy his inner demands of a creative outlet."

For those who neither paint nor work in clay there is a school where the children can work with tools to build objects. The 3-year-olds derive much satisfaction from pounding nails on a straight piece of wood. To them this is a ship. With age and more experience they, too, add more details, similar to the art students. Aeroplane building shares popularity with boat construction.

In painting, working in clay and building, explained Miss Mendham, children usually make the things that come within the range of their own experience and observation. She thinks that mothers can encourage their children to develop artistic talents by providing workshops in the home and furnishing them with adequate materials, similar to those used in the nursery schools.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 24.

WELL, THAT stuffed bird is here again—at least, for those who can afford him in this parlous time. Too many, alas, can't quite raise the price of chestnuts for stuffing, let alone a nosegay of sage. But the spirit of the truly American feast is at large for all who want to avail themselves of it.

ALICE HUGHES.

At least we all have one great cause for thanksgiving—the preservation of our peace in a war-tortured world, and our right to thank whomever we please for its blessing.

Our family gluttony will be indulged at several spots. Father and I expect to gnaw a wing at Marion Stephenson's annual party for waifs and strays, and young Martin will be given his first chance to cope with a drumstick. From there we shall trek to two or three other hospitable homes, to fill the crevices with pumpkin pie and other fixin's. By 10 tonight we shall each swallow a good dose of the historic rhubarb and soda, and dream that someone is forcing another dipper of mashed potatoes on us.

Most of the town is at home today, with its feet under its own table, for by some strange alchemy all New York reverts to real Americanism on this particular day. Every citizen who came here from another hamlet to seek fame and fortune, and found the subway, tries his or her level best to keep the spirit, tradition and rites of the feast intact. Usually they succeed. The happiest sight of the year here is a family gathered around its creaking board, just as the saddest is a lonely girl eating a table d'hote dinner at a cheap restaurant.

• • • •

There isn't one of us who can't scare up several reasons for heartfelt thanksgiving today, even if it's nothing more cosmic than not having a toothache. Yes, in some odd way one sliver of turkey makes the whole city kin!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The most novel Thanksgiving invite I received was inclosed in the shell of a walnut—an item to be noted for next year's parties.

• • • •

A few nights ago I took Evon Nollette, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Bertie Taylor, late of Indianapolis, to a press review of Fred Astaire's first solo starring film, "A Damsel in Distress," and thought it a dream of a comic movie. It introduces a lovely new girl, Joan Fontaine, who is a sister of Olivia de Havilland and a promising novice. We wound up with a round of sodas, and staggered home dizzy but happy . . . Oh, this New York night life!

• • • •

I'm really thankful because "Fashion Futures" is over for the year. This annual show, for two of whose numbers I was responsible, played to 2,500 people in the Waldorf. The American-designed clothes were brilliant, and all went excellently well. As Mary Livingston would say, "Thanksgiving, oh, Thanksgiving!"

• • • •

I've just seen a very fine Christmas present for Daddy. It's called the Time Secretary—a clock imbedded in leather, and poking through a date pad which has a space for every hour of the day's progress. One look tells both the time and what is supposed to be going on. One fast look, and Father knows all!

Black Is Favored For Daytime Wear

White and Light Colors Used With Dark Ensemble.

Paris (U.P.).—Black worn with white and light colors is Bruyere's choice for smart daytime clothes in the mid-season collection. Light wool costumes in black with white satin blouses are a highlight of the showing, and rhinestone clips are the leading trim.

A black two-piece daytime ensemble is made in lightweight wool with straight-cut skirt and waist-length jacket of bloused design, fitted to a snug wide belt. With the costume is worn a lustrous white satin blouse with long, fitted sleeves. The bodice is draped from center of the waistline, where it is fastened with a wine grosgrain ribbon which forms a corselet belt, dropped lower at the back. The suit jacket, opened to the waistline, is trimmed with a pair of rhinestone clips at the neck.

By the Associated Press.

New York.—It won't be the "Perfect 36" in '38. Next year's glamour girl will measure the same around the hips and the bust—34. And her waist must measure 10 inches less!

These are the specifications of James Dowd, jr., director of Models Preferred, New York school in which girls are groomed for professional fashion and beauty work.

She Should Be Tall.

Furthermore, says Dowd, Miss 1938 should be at least 5 feet 7 inches tall—in her stocking feet. Five feet 9 would be even better.

Dowd, aided by his wife, who is the school's fashion counsel, picks potential beauties not only by height and figure. Character, personality and facial structure enter.

The best faces, say the Dowds, have high cheekbones, eyes fairly far apart, noses short and fairly small.

High cheekbones often are accompanied by large jaws, but those may be disguised by careful rouging of powdering the jaws a shade darker than the rest of the face.

Six Long Weeks.

Eyes can be made to appear farther apart by plucking the brows in the middle and lengthening their line at the ends. Bringing the rouge in close will minimize a broad nose.

Two of the hardest phases of training models are prescribing—and enforcing—exercises and diets for hips and bust.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

LIKE SIMONE SIMON, who said "I hate my face," most of us are not very thankful for what we have. The cute Simone was belittling the pug nose and pout that are earning a fat salary and I doubt if she would change them.

Not very many of us are satisfied with the way we look, and, yet, if it came to a showdown there isn't a woman who would change her looks beyond recognition. Certainly we would like to take our bad points and minimize them, and our good points and glorify them. The smart women does just that. We can all be thankful that this is 1937 and not the good old days when the ugly duckling stayed that way.

With a few history making exceptions "born beauties" are rare. Most of the women who pass for beautiful have flaws. Their beauty is a composite of a good figure, a lovely posture, perfect skin, shining hair and impeccable grooming. What do they have that you can't get? Nothing. There is almost no limit to the improvement that can be made in these components of beauty.

Nature is not always as generous as she might be and it is true that we cannot all be beautiful or even pretty—but all Eve's daughters can be attractive.

Hair that is drab, stringy and straight can be brought to life with hot oil treatments and manipulation of the scalp, and then brushed and brushed until it shines. A few weeks of this reconditioning, followed by a good permanent and an individualized coiffure can very nearly make a new woman of you.

Cold cream works wonders—but there are other essentials to a beautiful complexion. You need an hour a day in the fresh air, your full share of vitamins—particularly B and C—exhilarating exercise, perfect elimination, and, not to be underrated, serenity. You may not be able to make your skin beautiful in a few weeks, but every day can bring some improvement.

Your figure probably needs the most fixing. Stretch to pull the waist up into a slim, youthful line. Get rid of the marring bulge here and roll there. Swing down your hips, snap up your posture, and one bright morning you will scarcely know yourself.

There is not one of us who would not like to have our looks improve just a little every day. Let's make that wish on the faithful old turkey wishbone . . . and then work consistently to make it come true!

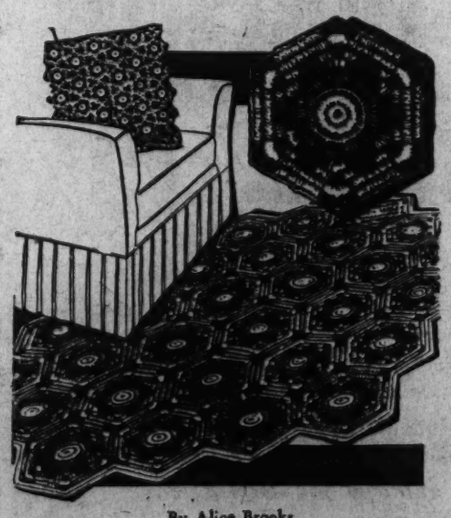
Colorful Crochetted Pillow Is Good Christmas Present



By Alice Brooks.

A COLORFUL Christmas gift holds its own right through the year! If it's to be pretentious, crochet a colorful rug—you can make it as large or small as you wish. If something smaller fulfills your ambition, make a pillow, using up odds and ends of yarn—each medallion can be different. Use rags, rug yarn of candlewick for the rug, four-fold Germantown for the pillow. You can make an afghan to match them, too. In pattern 5715 you will find instructions for making the rug shown as well as a pillow and afghan; an illustration of the rug and of all stitches used; material requirements; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Cold Turkey by Candlelight Is Simple Thanksgiving Finale

Foods for Evening Meal Should Afford Contrast to Regular Feast; Appetizers, Tart Salads and Cheeses Suggested.

By Jean Green.

The Post Food Editor.

IN MANY HOMES the Thanksgiving supper is given just as much stress as the banquet. The dinner itself is the feast meal, but the supper is simple and intimate. Instead of the menu being elaborate, the method of serving is emphasized. Only a few dishes are selected, but they are served in a dramatic fashion. Perhaps gay pottery is used, or black pottery on a silver thread cloth. The lighting is carefully controlled. For sophisticated serving, tall tapers may be grouped at one end of the table instead of in the center.

JEAN GREEN.

Since simplicity is the keynote for the menu, the dishes must be selected with care. For appetites satiated with rich, heavy flavors, a contrast is needed. Foods that have crispness, tart flavor and few calories are needed. These can be obtained from the fresh fruits and vegetables. The generous bowl of mixed salad greens, or a combination salad composed of all kinds of canned or fresh diced vegetables, garnished with green and red pepper rings, is excellent. Finger lengths of American, pimento and Swiss cheese can be served to make this salad a main course for the supper.

Appetizers Important.

For a first course crisp appetizers are still taking the lead. Hearts of celery stuffed with flavorful cheeses, spicy sausage, and olives, make a colorful combination. Serve the tray with Italian bread, cut in finger length sticks.

If there is left-over turkey to be used, combine it with celery and tart fruits, such as pineapple or diced fresh grapes. This will add a more succulent taste.

Hot breads can be included on the menu if it is to be a special guest meal. A special tea, such as jasmine tea or rose leaf tea, will add interest. Russian tea made with fruit juice and spices is also good.

It is not too soon to start serving eggnog. If you have "open house" to friends on Thanksgiving evening, then plan on simple refreshments. Eggnog made with pineapple juice is not so rich as the standard variety.

Eggnog With Pineapple Juice.

2 eggs.
2 tablespoons of sugar.
½ cup of cream.

Separate the yolks and whites of the eggs. Add 1 tablespoon of sugar to the egg yolks and beat thoroughly. Heat the pineapple juice. Add the cream. Reheat. Pour the hot pineapple juice on the egg yolks and sugar. Add rest of sugar to the stiffly beaten eggs whites. Fold into the hot mixture. Serve in eggnog glasses or punch cups with a sprinkle of grated orange peel or nutmeg.

The flavor of Creole artistry will be found in these oysters:

Panned Oysters.

1 pint of oysters.
2 teaspoons of butter.
¾ teaspoon of salt.
⅛ teaspoon of pepper.
8 soda crackers.
Lemons.

Drain oysters and heat liquor in the saucepan. Skim and season with salt and pepper, adding butter. Toast crackers and moisten with liquor. Place three oysters on each cracker. Dot with butter. Sprinkle with pepper and three or four drops of lemon juice. Set in hot oven for 12 minutes. Serve at once.

Floating Pins Forecast French Girls' Marriage

Paris.—The girls of a village in the Vosges Mountains determine their matrimonial future by throwing pins into St. Sabine's Fountain, according to Arthur Dobson, manager of the American Express Travel Service, who reports that if the pin defies gravity by floating, its tosser believes that she will marry soon. If it sinks, the young lady in question knows she will not be married for at least a year. Various strategies are used to keep the pins afloat, but only about a tenth of them remain on the surface of the fountain.

Meem Sisters' Debut Proves Brilliant Affair

'Twins' Sparkle Among Merry Guests Who Include General and Mrs. Malin Craig and Mrs. Mark Bristol.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Washington, which is now mostly debut parties, was mostly landscape when the Carrolls and Youngs with grants from the Crown moved in on pastures edging the Potomac, took up diggings in a cave or two and founded one of the Capital's oldest dynasties.

About the same period, the Meem family shook the dust of Virginia from their boots and settled in King George's town . . . on the other side of the creek.

Yesterday, seven generations later by Greenwich time, two winsome descendants of these early settlers—Cave-dwellers with a capital "C," if you please—stepped out in a whirl of white marquisette as Miss Ann Carroll Meem and Miss Eleanor Eastbourne Meem made their curtsies to Washington society.

Diplomats, officials and old Washington residents gathered by dozens and scores late yesterday afternoon at the home of the debutantes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, on Thirty-fourth place for a tea that turned out to be one of the most successful of the season.

In a drawing room where fall flowers—chrysanthemums, roses and dahlias—were arranged in huge vases and banked against greenery, the winsome buds greeted the hundreds of guests. Dressed alike, as they always are, they wore quaint frocks of white marquisette, cut with full skirts and snug bodices. The top fold of each gown covered a shirred and hooped underskirt and was trimmed with rows of blu velvet ribbons and bunches of blue hyacinths. A matching neckband of velvet was tied coquettishly in front to set off each costume. Both girls carried round colonial bouquets of pink roses.

"They look just as debutantes should," one guest commented.

"Exactly," another replied. "They couldn't be lovelier—not even if they had stepped straight out of Godey's Ladies Book."

Bevy of Buds Assist Honorees

The Misses Meem had assisting them Miss Barbara Bradley, Miss Barbara Bolling, Miss Caroline Cecil, Miss Dorothy Coman, their house guest; Miss Helen Nicholson Crean, Miss Patricia Griffin, Miss Elaine Fitzhugh Heiskell, Miss Alexandrine Rowan, Miss Peggy Townsend and Miss Anne Underwood.

Assisting Mrs. Meem were a number of friends of long standing, several of whom have known yesterday's debutantes since they were infants. In the group were Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mrs. Thomas Bradley, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Malin Craig, Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. William D. Leahy, Mrs. George Roe Lockwood, Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Mrs. Freeman Marsh, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan, Mrs. Chambers Oliphant, Miss Lelia Meem Peachy, Mrs. Arthur Peter, Mrs. William A. Snow, Mrs. William J. Snow and Mrs. Robert L. Walsh.

Among the guests were Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed and Mrs. Richard Dana, of New York, aunts of the Misses Meem, who came down especially to be present at the coming-out party.

In the gay gathering assembled to honor the two debutantes, there was much favorable comment about the girls, who are frequently referred to as "the Meems twins" because they dress alike and are seen everywhere together. Judging from reports each of these will be as popular as any bud on this season's list. They are sure to be about at all the top-flight parties for girls of their age here, and they will also attend the first Monday german in Baltimore on December 6.

Real Washington Represented at Party

At tables in the library and on the sun porch, punch and sandwiches were served to the crowd that surged around for fully two hours. In the dining room, at a long table, lighted with cream-colored candles, decorated with roses and loaded with refreshments, tea and coffee were poured. But it was the crowd—old friends, old acquaintances, old Washington that had its roots many years ago—that, next to the buds, was of most interest to onlookers. For the party, as few in the Capital in past years, represented the city's tribute to its own.

A list of all the guests would read like page after page of the Social Register and Who's Who in the Nation's Capital. To mention but a few of those I glimpsed there—Mrs. Royal McKenna and her daughter, Miss Helen McKenna; Mrs. J. Breckinridge Bayne, in a black ensemble: Baroness von Below, in blue velvet and a gray turban; Mrs. William Sturtevant, Mrs. Thomas Armat, arriving with Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who has just returned from New York; Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Arthur Peter, Miss Evalyn McLean, in a frock of black velvet, cut on simple lines and set off with a black hat, and Miss Stellita Stapleton in a brown outfit.

Also, the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, completely surrounded with friends; Mme. Vladimir Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovakian Minister; Capt. Umberto Cugia, of the Italian Embassy, the State Department's Chief of Protocol, George T. Summerlin; Admiral William D. Leahy, Gen. Malin Craig, Capt. and Mrs. Stephen C. Rowans, and scores and scores of others.

20,000 Expected Today

More than 20,000 persons are expected to attend the national thanksgiving service today at 11 a. m. at the Washington Cathedral to commemorate the sesquicentennial of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

Members of the Cabinet will sit in the fore part of the nave; the Diplomatic Corps and their guests will be in the south transept; members of Congress will sit in the choir, and Masonic officials and their guests will occupy the north transept.

Tea Presents Mary Burke to Capital Society

Miss Sylvia Szechenyi Aids Debutante at Home of Her Parents.

Among yesterday's debutantes was Miss Mary Burke, attractive daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Burke, who was presented to society at a tea yesterday at the home of their parents on Tracy place.

Fall flowers in profusion were used in decorations throughout the house and on the tea table.

Assisting the debutante were Miss Sylvia Sechnyi, who was guest of honor at a tea dance Tuesday given by Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister; Miss Alice Barry and Miss Barbara Bradley, who were recently introduced to society; Miss Mary Wilson and Miss Dudley Gregory, who are also on the list of this season's debutantes; Miss Helen Lippitt, Miss Neville Atkinson, of Middleburg, Va., and Miss Eleanor Lambert, of Long Island, and Miss Ann Nash, of Savannah, Ga., who came to Washington especially for the party and are house guests of Miss Burke.

The debutante, who has a host of friends in the Capital, is from an old and distinguished family, several members of which are noted in Virginia history.

Spanish Envoy Host For Father of Aide, Here From Madrid

The Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, entertained at luncheon yesterday honoring Dr. Gustavo Pittaluga, internationally noted specialist in public health, and member of the sanitary commission of the League of Nations, who just arrived from Madrid and is visiting his son, Gustavo Pittaluga, jr., second secretary of the Spanish Embassy.

Among guests were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Parran, Dr. and Mrs. L. B. Thompson, Dr. and Mrs. J. Breckinridge Bayne, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Thomas Burke, Fernando Montesinos and the honor guest's son.

Marie McCook To Be Honored

Add to the list of debutante activities the luncheon which the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart will give tomorrow for Miss Marie Tudor McCook, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McCook, of Pasadena, Calif. The affair will be held at Langley Park, the McCormick-Goodhart home in Silver Spring.

One of the highlights of Thanksgiving, socially speaking, will be the dinner for Miss McCook, which her grandmother, Mrs. Anson G. McCook, and her aunt, Mrs. McCook Knox, will give this evening at the Chevy Chase Club before the semi-weekly dance given there. There will be about 60 guests, including Mr. and Mrs. McCook, parents of the debutante, for whom Mrs. Knox and Mrs. Anson McCook are inviting a few of their friends.

Miss McCook arrived in Washington yesterday to attend the dinner given at the 1925 F street club by Mrs. Richard Wilmer and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor for Miss Marian Kirk. Miss Kirk, the daughter of Capt. Alan Kirk, U. S. N., and Mrs. Kirk, will be presented to society this afternoon at a tea to be given by her grandmother, Mrs. Frederic L. Chapin.

W. F. Weigester, Miss Ayres Wed

Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral was scene of an important but quiet wedding yesterday at high noon when Miss Margaret Ayres, daughter of William A. Ayres, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, became the bride of William Frederick Weigester, son of William Weigester, of Troy, Pa., and Vallejo, Calif.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length costume consisting of a moss-green skirt and overblouse of lighter green trimmed with sequins. Her felt hat and shoes were of blending shades and her corsage was of purple orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. H. Janney Nichols, jr., of Westfield, N. J., twin sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her frock was of parma violet satin, cut on simple lines and worn with a felt picture hat to match.

Her bouquet was of pale pink roses, purple sweet peas and baby breath. Cyril Drew Pearson, of Great Neck, Long Island, was best man.

Among out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Ward, of Westfield, N. J., and Mrs. Herman Hoffman, Mrs. E. W. Liggett, Mrs. E. S. Edgerton and Mrs. J. W. Craig, all of Wichita, Kans.

The bride is a graduate of George Washington University and has a host of friends here. Mr. Weigester attended Pennsylvania State College and George Washington University.

On their return from New York City the couple will live at the Kennedy-Warren.

Duchess Is Guest Of Italian Prince At Dinner Tonight

Prince del Drago, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, will give a dinner tonight at his home on Twenty-fourth street, for the Duchess of Westminster, who arrived on Tuesday to spend a few days in the Capital. She will be at the Mayflower Hotel during her sojourn here.

Yesterday the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet entertained at a cocktail party for the duchess. The third wife of the duke, she is the former Miss Loeila Ponsonby, daughter of the late Frederick Ponsonby, who was made a peer a few years before his death for his service as aide to King Edward VII.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

REPRESENTATIVE AND Mrs. Robert Low Bacon will entertain at a small tea on Sunday afternoon for a most attractive visitor to Washington—Mrs. Roger Tuckerman of New York. She is the former Betty Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips Thompson of that city, and having at the last minute decided to come to the Capital tomorrow to remain until Tuesday, will stop with her sister, Miss Phyllis Thompson.

Vivacious, beautiful, and amusing, Mrs. Tuckerman is one of the most popular members of New York's younger marrieds. She has many friends in the Capital also, among them, Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett, who are inviting a few friends in for cocktails on Monday in her honor. Mrs. Tuckerman will also attend the dance to be given on Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dewey, and that afternoon will go to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper DuBose for cocktails.

* * * *

WHEN A DEBUTANTE "comes out" at an afternoon reception here, you may be sure that the party will be a mixture of many ages and circles. There are her friends, those of her mother and father, and then all the relatives, including those who never turn up for anything except a family affair.

Such a party was that given yesterday for the only young lady from Army circles to "come out" so far this year, Miss Rosemary Newman, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Richard D. Newman. It was a "home" party, like every other so far this season, being held at the Newman residence on Arlington road, a colonial brick house overlooking the Potomac and surrounded with large grounds.

* * * *

THE DEBUTANTE, who is blonde and pretty, was most attractive yesterday as she received with her mother before the fireplace in the drawing room. Her white net gown, made with a very full skirt, was shot with gold threads, and she wore a little gold jacket made with long sleeves. Mrs. Newman was gowned in a black velvet skirt with a silver jacket and wore a corsage of orchids.

Col. Newman had spent the entire afternoon concocting the punch, according to a special recipe, and all the guests pronounced it delicious. His home is filled with lovely bronzes and bits of furniture picked up in the Philippines and other places where he has seen duty. The dining room looked particularly festive, decorated with masses of chrysanthemums and white candles on the table.

* * * *

ASSISTING Miss Newman during the party were several of her sister debutantes, including Miss Anne Mahoney, Miss Elaine Heiskell, Miss Alex Rowan, who was presented the day before at a tea at the Navy Yard and Miss Florence Cauthin. Other friends of the daughter of the house were Miss Elizabeth Hersey, of Philadelphia; Miss Adele Harvey, of that city; Miss Amy Lou Murray, of Takoma, Wash.; Miss Betty Balsley, of Newport, and Miss Janice Robb, of Washington.

* * * *

MRS. NEWMAN was assisted by a group of her friends, including Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army; Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright, whose husband is commandant at Fort Myer; Mrs. David S. Barry, Mrs. J. J. O'Hara, Mrs. Josephine Tenny, Mrs. Roy Henry, Mrs. A. D. Surles, Mrs. William Gordon, Miss Rose Clark, Mrs. T. L. Thomas, Mrs. Robert Strong, Miss M. F. Cunningham, Mrs. Albert Blanding, Mrs. Charles Mortimer, Mrs. B. T. Merchant and Mrs. William Nalle.

The Newmans came to Washington a year ago from Philadelphia, where he was stationed. Miss Newman is a graduate of the Shipley School in Bryn Mawr.

Mrs. Neumann, Mr. Kuper Wed

At a simple ceremony in the office of Judge Robert E. Mattingly, Mrs. Marietta von Neumann of Budapest, was married to J. B. Horner Kuper, of Washington, formerly of New York. The ceremony, which was attended only by the immediate relatives, was followed by a breakfast in a private suite at the Shoreham.

The bride wore a simple costume of gray duvetyn and broadtail, with a corsage of white orchids. Her only attendant was Mrs. John E. Barrett, of New York, sister of the bridegroom. John Barrett was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Kuper will reside at 2116 Kalorama road in Washington, where the former is associated with the Biophysical Institute. Mrs. Kuper was formerly Mrs. John von Neumann, wife of Prof. von Neumann, of Princeton University. Mr. Kuper is a graduate of Williams College and Princeton.

Venezuelan Diplomat Host at Dinner Tonight

The Counselor of the Venezuelan Legation, Dr. Jacinto Fombona-Pachano, and Senora de Fombona-Pachano, will entertain informally at dinner this evening in the blue room of the Shoreham Hotel.

Among guests will be the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, the Minister of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalente; Alberto Vargas Narino, Secretary of the Colombian Legation, and Senora de Vargas; Jose Camacho Lorenzana, Commercial Attache of the Columbia Legation, and Arturo Lares, Secretary of the Venezuelan Legation.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

Mrs. Roosevelt has issued invitations to a party she will give the night of December 11, at the White House. Guests will be wives of those who will attend the annual Gridiron dinner that evening, as well as several distinguished women in official life and newspaper women.

Miss Colliflower Is Married to Frank Grimes

St. Gabriel's Rectory Is Scene as Dr. Vaeth Officiates.

Miss Mary Louise Colliflower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ernest Colliflower, and Frank Hume Grimes, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Grimes, were married yesterday at noon in a quiet service in St. Gabriel's Rectory. The Rev. Louis C. Vaeth officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white satin cut along very simple lines, with a high neck trimmed with a pin of brilliants at the throat. Her softly fitted sleeves ended in points over her hands, and her long train was fashioned in circular style. Her veil of bridal illusion was fastened to a Juliet cap of tulle over satin, which was embroidered in a rosary design of brilliants and silver metallic thread. She carried an arm bouquet of white orchids and white camellias.

Bride Has Two Attendants

Her sister, Miss Gertrude Colliflower, was her maid of honor, and wore a peacock blue slipper satin dress. Her flowers were bronze chrysanthemums, tied with changeable taffeta ribbon. Miss Capel Grimes, sister of the bridegroom, was the other attendant, and wore Margo rose with gold accessories.

John Calder Brenner was best man, while Joseph F. X. Colliflower, brother of the bride, served as usher.

At the large reception, which followed the ceremony, held in the bamboo room of the Willard Hotel, the mother of the bride chose for her costume a sapphire velvet dress with matching hat and wore a corsage of yellow roses and lilies of the valley. The bridegroom's mother was in black velvet, trimmed with sequins and worn with a hat of sequins. Her flowers were gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Couple Will Make Home Here

The couple, who left for a motor trip to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., will be at home after December 20 at 1007 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

The bride is a graduate of St. Cecilia's Academy, while the bridegroom, who is associated with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, is a graduate of Virginia Military institute and a member of the Army and Navy Country Club.

Harvey - Battle Nuptials Held

Miss Mildred Ida Battle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Battle, of this city, became the bride last night of Robert Edwin Harvey, son of Mrs. J. William Harvey, of Silver Spring, Md., in the Sixth Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. J. Herbert Garner officiating. The candlelight service was performed in a setting of chrysanthemums and palms.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a heavy cream satin gown, cut on princess lines with a long train and long, puffed sleeves. Her veil of tulle and Belgian lace was caught with pearls at the back of the neck, and her flowers were white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her matron of honor—Mrs. Mary Battle Bowman—wore wine velvet with a train and trimmings of gold to match her gold leaf headdress. She carried gold and bronze chrysanthemums. Miss Margaret Barringer, maid of honor, wore the same costume as the matron of honor. Other attendants were Mrs. P. Hendley Napier, Miss Betty Lum, Miss Lucy Porter, Miss Dorothy Hunter and little Mary Ida Bowman, niece of the bride, who was flower girl. All wore royal blue velvet and carried gold and bronze chrysanthemums.

P. Hendley Napier was best man. The ushers were J. William Harvey, jr.; George A. Harvey, Richard P. Battle, Eldon Edgerton, Dr. William Mitchell Hoover, Lawrence Linthicum and Laurence Sherfy.

At the reception at the home of the bride's parents, the mother of the bride wore a wine-colored dress and a corsage of gardenias. The mother of the bridegroom was in black lace and also wore a corsage of gardenias.

Joseph Marshall Weds Jane Dwire In Bloomfield, N.J.

An out-of-town wedding of interest to Washington took place yesterday in Bloomfield, N. J., when Miss Jane Schouler Dwire, daughter of Mrs. George Franklin Dwire, of Essex Falls, N. J., and the late Mr. Dwire, of Winston-Salem, N. C., became the bride of Joseph Paull Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall, of Washington. The ceremony, performed by Dr. Archibald G. Sinclair, was solemnized at the First Presbyterian Church.

After their wedding trip, the couple will reside in Washington.

Wearing white satin, the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Douglas Dodge Schouler, of Essex Falls. Her maid of honor was Miss Phoebe Pierson, of Verona, N. J., while her bridesmaids were Miss Betty Lou Schouler, of Essex Falls, cousin of the bride, and Miss Elinor Davis, of Winchester, Mass.

John Marshall, jr., of Baltimore, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. The ushers were Douglas Dodge Schouler, jr., cousin of the bride; Minor Jameson, jr., and Charles Denny, jr., both of Washington; Luther Ely Smith, of St. Louis, Mo.; John White, of Boston, Mass.; Heminway Merriman, jr., of Watertown, Conn.; Dr. William Davis, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Edward Snowden, of New York.

Mrs. Kerr Will Fete Her Daughter Today

Mrs. Frank A. Kerr will entertain at tea today from 5 to 7 p. m. in honor of her daughter, Miss Frances Kerr, whose marriage to Dr. James J. Murphy will take place Saturday.

Receiving with the hostess and the honoree will be the latter's wedding attendants, Miss Regis Boyle, Miss Lucy McAnany and Miss Elizabeth O'Connor. Mrs. Kenneth Laird and Miss Margaret O'Donnell also will assist.

Mrs. Hurja Entertains At Last of Her Fall Teas

Mrs. Emil Hurja entertained yesterday afternoon at the last of a series of small teas she has been giving this fall at her home on California street.

Assisting her were Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General; Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro and Mrs. Morris Clark.

Soroptimists Observe 15th Anniversary

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Miss Daisy Reed, president of the Soroptimist Club, yesterday assumed the role of crystal gazer to welcome new members who were guests of honor at a luncheon in the Hotel Willard, celebrating the club's anniversary.

Wearing an East Indian headdress, Miss Reed looked into a crystal and described the classification of each new member, asking what connection the revelation in the crystal had with the club. Response came from the sponsor for each of the honored guests and from past presidents of the club, who welcomed them officially with the presention of a little rose bowl and a membership certificate from the president.

The new members were Emma Karst, Mrs. Celia Bowers, Mrs. Emily Shaw, Miss Elsie Boswell, Mrs. Rose Iser, Dr. Rosalind Bayne, Mabel Dickson and Mrs. Katherine Morris.

The past presidents included Mrs. Mary Lewis, Miss Ella C. Werner, Miss Marjorie Webster, who gave the rose bowls; Mrs. Ruby Lee Minar, Miss Nora Huffman and Mrs. Caroline Stephen.

The club's birthday anniversary was by no means neglected. Mrs. Nell Hysong, one of its past presidents, donated the chrythemums which decorated the tables and also the birthday cake.

In addition the program also incldded piano solos by Mrs. F. R. Wadleigh.

The regular luncheon December 8 will be a business meeting for the election of officers, with the ticket headed by Mrs. Agnes Newman. She is the only nominee for president. Several of the offices have more than one candidate.

Miss Webster, who is chairman of the banquet committee, announced January 8 as the date of the annual banquet, when installation of officers will take place. The affair will be held in the small ballroom of the Willard.

Guests at yesterday's luncheon included: Zada Daniels and Mrs. George Phillips, the guests of Mrs. Laura Waters; Miss Claire Keefe, the guest of Mrs. Ella Hildebrandt, and Mrs. Irene Thuli, past president of the San Diego, (Calif.) Soroptimist Club.

Play Gets Backing Of Ignatian Guild

The Ignatian Guild, formerly the Guild of Jesuit Mothers, met at the home of Miss Cecilia O'Leary last evening to discuss plans for the production of a play by the Mask and Bauble Club of Georgetown University at Gaston Hall, Wednesday evening, December 15.

Miss O'Leary, a sister of the Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, is active in the guild of which Bernard M. Wise is president.

Miss Katherine A. Ruppert is chairman of the committee sponsoring the forthcoming production. Other committee members include Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Daly, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Beatty, Miss Ellen T. Becker, Mrs. William F. Yates, former president of the guild; Miss O'Leary, Miss Margaret O'Leary and Mr. and Mrs. Wise.

Each year the guild sponsors a benefit, proceeds from which go to complete a purse for the education of a student for the priesthood in the Jesuit Order.

Baskets of Food Bring Cheer on Thanksgiving Day

The Henry D. Cook Parent-Teacher Association was one of the many organizations in Washington which distributed generous Thanksgiving baskets yesterday, spreading cheer among the less fortunate families of the District. Children of the school helped fill them, seeing that each was packed with its full quota of supplies, enough to last much longer than a single day. In the picture, left to right, are Marjorie Cole, looking like one of the original Pilgrims; Mrs. C. D. Angel, president of the Cook P.-T. A.; Mrs. David Becker and Lorraine McCrahon, another little pilgrim from the student body.

Mrs. Calvert to Head Line at Maryland Fete

Mrs. George H. Calvert, jr., wife of the president of the Maryland Society, will head the receiving line at a reception and dance to be given by the society tomorrow night at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel in celebration of the sailing of the first Maryland colonists from Cowes, England, on November 22, 1633, on the Ark and the Dove.

Others in the line will be Miss Mary W. Merrick, second vice president; Mrs. Clement W. Sheriff, wife of the treasurer; Mrs. George Amory Maddox, wife of the historian; Mrs. Robert M. Boteler and Mrs. Robert Howard. Introductions will be made by Admiral Charles H. T. Lowndes. Dr. Richard Lee Silvester will be chairman of the floor committee.

To Sponsor Donation Day.

The board of managers of the Episcopal Church Home will have its annual donation day at the home Saturday, from 9:30 to 5:30 p. m. The home is located at 3625 Macomb street. Those assisting will be Mrs. W. H. Cross, Mrs. H. Boteler, Mrs. H. R. Kerslake and Mrs. A. B. Heaton.

Zonta Club Pays Honor to Founder

Mrs. Edith Charlton Salisbury, who organized the Zonta Club of Washington in 1922, was honored by its members yesterday at their pre-Thanksgiving luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Each member presented her a rose in a ceremony of tribute and affection.

The club, which now has a membership of more than 50, has but three charter members still active. The others are Miss Emma T. Hahm and Miss Estelle Foster.

Dr. Raphael H. Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church, gave a Thanksgiving message to the club which he expressed in the statement: "It is not important that I have Pilgrim blood in my veins—but that I have the Pilgrim spirit in my soul."

Dr. Miller's daughter, Miss Margaret Miller, was among the guests. Others included Miss Cornelia F. Muddiman, sister of Miss Anna Muddiman, treasurer of the club; Miss Nell Engels, a former member; Mrs. Nannie Lynch, of this city, and Mrs. Martha West, of Virginia and Massachusetts, whom Miss Emily Dickinson introduced as her girlhood friend; Mrs. Aida A. Anderson, mother of Miss Hettie Anderson, and Mrs. Mary Dickerson, mother of Mrs. Mildred D. McCallit.

Thanksgiving Baskets Filled

Parent-Teacher Associations and Girls' Clubs Help.

Organizations throughout the city were busy yesterday filling Thanksgiving baskets for needy families. Among these were many of the Parent-Teacher Associations and, in Central High School, the Bon Secour Club of Girl Reserves.

The club appealed to the entire student body to help make Thanksgiving happy for those less fortunate. They set up tables on each floor of the school building, where the donations of staple groceries were assembled in the morning. More than 50 baskets were filled with generous contributions and have already been distributed.

Virginia Rice, who heads the Bon Secour Club, was assisted by Jere Dell Sale as co-chairman of the Thanksgiving project, and Mrs. Dell Gilbert Sale, president of the Central High School P.-T. A., and members of the association co-operated.

Twenty baskets were sent out by the Parent-Teacher Association of Henry D. Cook School, of which Mrs. C. D. Angel is president, and among others which distributed them were the associations of Eliot Junior High, Woodbridge, Barnard, Blow-Webb, Key, Fillmore, and many of the high schools.

Thanksgiving Dance Planned by Bell Club

A Thanksgiving dance under the auspices of the Bell Club will be held in the Masonic Hall, on Rhode Island avenue near Mills avenue northeast tomorrow for the benefit of St. James' Catholic Church in Mount Rainier, Md. Dancing will be from 9 to 12 with a shag contest included.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

WHILE CLUB WOMEN of the Nation are counting their blessings today, they will no doubt number among them the high aim in which they unite when repeating their Club Collect.

It was written more than 30 years ago by Mary Stewart, then a young school teacher in Longmont, Colo. She joined a woman's club but soon discovered the harmony of club activities was marred by petty things which became obstacles to worthwhile endeavor. Troubled by the sight of little differences causing wide breaches where there should have been a joining of hands in noble purpose, she wrote the Collect. A short time later she sent it to The Delineator which published it in May, 1905, among club notes in back of the magazine.

She little thought then that it would become the creed for millions of club women. The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, the General Fedeartion of Women's Clubs and countless other organizations have adopted it.

Her own field of usefulness has expanded simultaneously with general adoption of her poem. She is now superintendent of Indian Education for the Department of the Interior at Sacramento Calif. She was one of the charter members of the Women's Joint Congressional Committee on which she served eight years as a representative of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, of which she is also a charter member, and now chairman of its vocational advisory committee.

This is the prayer she has given club women:

COLLECT.

Keep us, O God, from pettiness, let us be large in thought, in word, in deed.

Let us be done with fault-finding, and leave off self-seeking.

May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face—without self-pity and without prejudice.

May we be never hasty in judgment and always generous.

Let us take time for all things; make us to grow calm, serene, gentle.

Teach us to put into action our better impulses, straight-forward and unafraid.

Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create difference; that in the big things of life, we are as one.

And may we strive to touch and to know the great common woman's heart of us all, and, O Lord, God, let us forget not to be kind.

MARION MARTIN, who is at the helm of the ship being "manned" by the Republican women in the next campaign, has her mother, Mrs. W. H. Martin, of Bangor, Me., with her for the Thanksgiving holidays. Mrs. Martin has been here for several days and will stay until Monday.

She and her daughter were guests of Mrs. Virginia White Speel yesterday at the Wednesday tea of the League of Republican Women. Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, of Maine, was another who attended, as did Mrs. Warren Haines, Mrs. H. S. LeRoy, Mrs. James E. Barnes, Mrs. Bruce Hoggson, Mrs. Edson W. Briggs, jr., Miss Kent, Miss Helen Downing, Mrs. J. H. Branson and Mrs. Truitt Michener, of New York. Mme. Cantacuzene, the league president, received.

MISS MARTIN returned just a week ago from a trip through Indiana. In Bloomington, incidentally, the alumna chapter of her sorority, Alpha Omicron Pi, entertained her and presented a bouquet of roses as a tribute from sorority sister to sorority sister, with no politics involved.

CLUB ENTRE NOUS provided a Thanksgiving party yesterday for patients of the psychopathic ward of Walter Reed Hospital. Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, founder and president of the club, with Mrs. James Underwood, chairman of its activities for the hospital, and Mrs. Miles Trowbridge took the ice cream and homemade cakes to the hospital yesterday afternoon.

Next month a party will be given in the recreation hall for other patients in the hospital.

To Whom It May Concern:

Ivan Nedomatsky, Maryland's Southern Conference lightweight boxing champion of two years ago, is under new management . . . Pete Reilley, who paid $1,000 for Nedomatsky's contract, has transferred it to Max Waxman, who piloted Joe Dundee to the world middleweight championship . . thus Nedomatsky is virtually in the Jack Dempsey stable of fighters, as Waxman is Dempsey's business manager . . . Reilly still holds the contract of former featherweight champ Freddie Miller, whom he is trying to maneuver into a bout with Henry Armstrong.

Twenty industries are represented by the 22 men on the board of directors of the Green Bay Packers . . . and each industry guarantees a job for at least one football player during the off season . . . a couple of seasons back two Packer teammates were political foes . . . Verne Lewellen, halfback, was the Republican candidate for district attorney, and Lavie Dilweg, end, was the Democratic candidate . . . Lewellen won the job . . . he's also president of the Green Bay Rotary Club.

Curly Byrd, president of Maryland University, has an unconquerable hankering to go back to football coaching . . . but takes pride in his selection of Frank Dobson as the Maryland coach . . . still attending classes at Maryland is Charley Keller, the rookie outfielder who was a sensation with Newark last year and will get a tryout next spring with the Yankees . . . Keller led the Newark team in hitting and batted .322 in the play-off series against Columbus . . . he signed with the Yankees because the New York club helped to lift a $12,000 mortgage on his father's farm.

Cleveland's Bobby Feller merits no salary raise on his 1937 pitching record, but he can demand an increase on the strength of his drawing power . . . the Indians recently disclosed that 121,000 fans paid to see last spring's barnstorming exhibition between Cleveland and the Giants . . . all other clubs in both leagues with the exception of the Yankees went into the red on their training trips . . . The Yanks and Cardinals will show a profit in the South next spring, though . . . they will play a series against each other at St. Petersburg . . . into which the Cardinals moved when the Bees moved out.

Reports are that movies of the Maryland-Georgetown game show that Blair Smith, Maryland end, was a full foot beyond the end zone when he caught the pass for Maryland's second touchdown . . . which should have been ruled a touchback, if the reports are true.

Second-String Team' Clicks—And How!

The Demonaires, the second-string team of the Demons, made up entirely of boys who "weren't good enough" for the first team, won the Class B title.

In the playoff for the all-university championship, the Demonaires routed the Demons, 18-7.

Both Teams End Season Out of Town

Maryland Favored to Win; George Washington Is Underdog.

On foreign fields to the North, George Washington and Maryland universities bring their football seasons to an end today.

At Morgantown, W. Va., the G. W. U. squad was encamped last night awaiting its battle with West Virginia University, counting on a victory that would close the 1937 campaign with a pleasing flourish.

At Baltimore, the Maryland Terrapins will take the field against a time-honored Southern Conference rival, Washington and Lee, and in this battle the Terrapins are heavily favored to win.

Fresh from an amazing scoreless tie with Arkansas, the Colonials will enter the West Virginia game as a powerful underdog. The West Virginians, who tied Georgetown, 6-6, and swamped Western Maryland, 64-0, are rated the favorites at 7-5 odds.

15,000 to See Game.

Fifteen thousand are expected to see the Morgantown game, in which Kelly Moan, the Mountaineers' clever passer, will be the chief threat to G. W. U. Moan and Clerk were a powerful pair in West Virginia's invasion of Washington against Georgetown.

In rebuttal, Coach Jim Pixlee will offer his own backfield aces, Vic Sampson and Bob Nowaskey, who distinguished themselves last week at Arkansas where the Colonials were supposed to be in for a merciless beating.

The Colonials today will be aiming to avenge three straight defeats at the hands of the Mountaineers in recent years. With the schedule at an end after today's game, Coach Jim Pixlee will hold nothing in reserve. It will be the final game for ten G. W. seniors, Kaufman, Mahan, Carroll, Tihila, Hogg, Yurwitz, Berry, Holt, Cottingham and Hallberger.

Maryland stock soared last night when it was learned that Capt. Will Rogers, Washington and Lee star, may be unable to start today's game. Coach Tex Wilson reported that Rogers' injured knee which he suffered several weeks ago has showed little improvement.

Maryland's Record Best.

Despite Coach Dobson's lack of reserves, Maryland has a record this season that is far superior to the Generals and when the Terrapins take the field, W. & L. will be asked to beat a team that has defeated Syracuse, Florida, V. M. I., Virginia and Georgetown, and which scored three touchdowns against Penn.

Coach Dobson, in a generous gesture, last night appointed as the Maryland co-captains for today's game Waverley Wheeler and Bill Bryant, two mainstays of the Terrapins during the past three years.

Maryland, if it follows precedent, will rely on the running game of Jim Meade and Skotnicki to crash the W. & L. line and vary its offensive with the clever passes of Charley Weidinger, who usually spots Blair Smith, end, as his receiver.

Johnnies Drill For Hopkins

Easy Workout Held for Saturday's Game.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 24.—Coach Valentine (Dutch) Lentz gave the St. John's College football team an easy workout today and then excused the players for the Thanksgiving holiday.

They will return Friday for the final practice for the fifty-fifth game with the Johns Hopkins University team in Baltimore. The series, which began in 1885, has been marked by intense rivalry. St. John's has won 25 games, Hopkins 22, while 7 have ended in ties.

The rivalry between the institutions today brought an armistice agreement between the student councils that any student committing vandalism or capturing the member of the opposing student body would be slated for expulsion.

As a result of the agreement the St. John's students yesterday freed seven Hopkins students captured when they came here. Previously the St. Johns' freshmen had invaded the Hopkins and captured two students which they liberated.

Dr. Scott Buchan, dean of St. John's, said the student councils would meet and draw up regulations governing pre-game activities of the student bodies in future games.

'Secret' Drill Is Held By Green Bay Eleven

Lambeau Runs Charges Through Special Workout With All Spectators Banned From Park—Prices of 600 Seats Boosted 50 Cents.

Within the heavily-patrolled confines of Griffith Stadium yesterday the Green Bay Packers rehearsed in deep, dark secrecy the attack they will turn loose against the Redskins on Sunday.

Prying eyes of Redskin sympathizers and the appraising glances of the mere curious, were excluded from the premises by Head Coach Curly Lambeau when his athletes had finished limbering up and began the business of hustling through their formations.

Several hundred spectators were routed from the field, including Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, and what the Packers accomplished in their workout will forever be a secret with the Green Bay athletes.

Famed for their fancy plays, Green Bay is prepared to take the lead of the entire repertoire on Sunday. They will have nothing to save, inasmuch as it is their final game of the season and they must win to stay in the league race. Thus it is believed that the Packers rehearsed all of their razzle-dazzle and hipper-dipper stuff in the private workout yesterday.

Seat Prices Boosted.

Ticket sales for Sunday's game went on apace yesterday with the greatest single day's sale recorded. Six hundred seats which in previous games had been selling for $1.10 have been upped to $1.65, it was revelead, despite the lack of an announcement that prices would be raised.

President George P. Marshall, of the Redskins, defending the action, declared: "Reports that there has been a general increase in prices for the game are not true. Of the 15,000 seats which the Redskins have been selling all season for $1.10, only 600 have been placed in the $1.65 price class.

"That was done to meet requests for additional reserved seats by fans who did not want to chance getting a general admission seat. The new prices affect less than 3 per cent of the seats we have been in the habit of selling for $1.10."

Redskins Also Work.

The Redskins preceded the Packers onto Griffith Stadium for a two-hour workout during the morning, emphasizing their defense for the open-style running and passing game of the Detroit Club.

Advised by his scouts of the Giants' success in using a five and six man line against the Packers' attack, Coach Ray Flaherty on Sunday may abandon the traditional seven-man line and adhere to the Giants' tactics.

National Football League records will be threatened when the Packers and Redskins take the field. Don Hutson, Packer end, already has tied the league record of 34 pass catches he established last season, and "Slingin' Sam Baugh needs to complete only 14 passes in the Redskins' last two games to break Arnie Herber's record of 77 completions in a single season.

Navy Soccer Team Wins

Closes Season With 2-1 Victory Over Lehigh.

Annapolis, Nov. 24.—Ending its soccer season here this afternoon by a victory over Lehigh by 2 to 1 in an especially well played game, the Navy players borrowed from the crew and sent Manager C. R. Welte hurtling from the adjacent seawall into the icy water of the Severn.

Barker carried the ball through and scored for the Navy eight minutes after the start, and Nelson kicked a loose ball through after nine minutes of the second.

Lehigh played the Navy to a standstill in the third quarter and scored five minutes into the final period when Enstine kicked cleverly past Goalie Haines.

Eagles Clash With Tigers

Close Season Today at American Stadium.

An underdog American University eleven will close its season against Hampden-Sydney this morning at American U. field at 10:30 a. m. The visitors, one of the stronger collegiate elevens in Virginia, will be favored on comparative scores, but Coach Welsh has injected new spirit and trickery into the Eagles attack and promises a close battle.

Three starting players were ousted in Welsh's "new spirit" campaign, and the locals will present a revised line-up, including Toner, Howard, Harris and Jablonski in the backfield.

The American U. lads are eager to close a rather disappointing season, including five defeats in seven games, in victory, and have been pepped up by Welsh in an attempt to upset the Tigers.

Softball Loop Sets 2 Games

In deference to the Army-Navy football game Saturday, the Community Center's Indoor Softball League double-header for that day has been moved up to next Tuesday.

In the first game, which will begin at 7:15 p. m. at Tech High, Community All Stars, one of three teams tied for first place in the second half race, meets Y. M. C. A. The other game finds Victory Post and Sogimas, tied for first, flinging themselves at each other's throats.

Tuesday, Victory Post inflicted a 14-4 defeat on the Bureau of Standards team. Until its defense cracked, Standards gave the Post a battle. "Tots" Long, of the victors, starred with four hits.

Anacostia High Bows To Wilson Eleven, 18-7

Last Half Scoring Punch Nets Wilson Victory After Southeast Lads Hold Game Scoreless at Half.

A last half scoring punch that netted three touchdowns gave Wilson High an 18-to-7 victory over Anacostia's gridders, yesterday in Roosevelt Stadium. Wilson, freshmen of the interhigh series, was playing the team that will replace it as series newcomer next year.

Center Sets Touch Finals

Indoor Football Games at Tech Tomorrow.

Finals of the two classes in the Community Center's Indoor Touch football tournament will be played tomorrow night in Tech High gymnasium.

The first game between the 12-14-year-olders of Eastern and Langley will start at 7:30 o'clock, with the nightcap between Eastern and Roosevelt in the 15-17-year-old group due to start an hour later.

Boys from seven community clubs took part in the tournament. They represented Jefferson, Powell, Langley, Woodrow Wilson, Anacostia, Eastern and Roosevelt.

Each team has seven players, all of whom are eligible for passes which may be thrown from any place behind the line of scrimmage. Laterals may be tossed at any point. Two hands must be used in touching before a down is declared.

Teams are allowed four downs to make a touchdown. Failure to score gives the ball to the other team on its own 10-yard line. Offside brings a 3-yard penalty.

St. Josephs Wins.

St. Joseph's defeated a strong Nativity eleven, 13 to 12, in a game played at the Reservoir Field yesterday.

After battling to a scoreless deadlock in the first half, with the Southeast lads repulsing a scoring threat on its 12-yard line, Wilson took a 12-to-7 lead in the third quarter and clinched the decision in the final period with a superfluous score.

Taking the ball on its own 40-yard line, Wilson inaugurated its first scoring drive when Maloney passed to Stevens on the Anacostia 18. Leach raced to the 7 on the next play. He made 4 more yards in two plays and then passed to Stevens for the score. Mesrobian's attempted placement was blocked.

Two plays later, after the kick-off, Miller intercepted Brinsfield's pass and ran 35 yards for the second score and a 12-to-0 lead as the kick was again blocked.

The Anacostia lads were back in the ball game as they carried the ball to the Wilson 43, where Brinsfield faded back and heaved a long pass to Seaman, who galloped 20 yards for a score just before the quarter ended. They crossed the Wilson defense by passing, Brinsfield to Marshall, on the conversion for the only point after touchdown of the game.

J. J. Stevens, the sure-fingered leftend of the winners, put the verdict on ice early in the final period as he caught a pass for Maloney and raced the remaining 25 yards for the final score.

Even Dogs Ask Navy To Win From Army

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 24 (AP).—With the approach of the Army-Navy football game even the local dogs are pulling for a Navy victory.

A medium-sized dog trotted through the streets today wearing a white cloth blanket on which "Beat Army" was painted. The windows of the city homes and stores carry cards urging the Navy to "Sink Army" or "Beat Army."

Georgia Coleman Ill.

Abrams Meets Barrie in Arena Semifinal

George Abrams, the dashing young Jewish middleweight, who is in the fight game—says George—to win the world championship and buy his mother a home, was signed yesterday to box in a semi-windup match to the feature bout between Tony Dupre and Baby Manuel next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Abrams' opponent is newcomer Johnny Barrie, of Pittsfield, Mass., who has been going great guns in New England fight circles. They will clash in an eight-rounder.

The match will mark Abrams' thirteenth time turning professional last May.

A product of the Golden Gloves and A. A. U. ranks, the 19-year-old Abrams has won 12 straight fights, and is considered one of the most sensational middleweights in local boxing history.

Barrie is expected to be Abrams' toughest opponent. A youngster himself, Barrie defeated Buster Hall, Negro fighter, two weeks ago, in Buffalo, and last Monday whipped Ralph Johns at Holyoke.

A clean-cut scrapper, who is trained and handled by Sid Fishel, Abrams scored his twelfth victory at the expense of Sarge Prevost, tough Russian-born fighter, who previously had whipped Hobo Williams. Abrams also has kayoed Johnny Stilson, Sammy Bacala, Bob Wilson, Tony Livingston, Charlie Rondo, Eddie Miles, and beaten Joe Chaney, Hunter Crosslie Charlie Ubele, Joey Spangler and Charlie Marshall.

Local fight experts predict a rosy future for Abrams. The unassuming youngster has promised his mother a home from his fight earnings. She is his best pal, and attends every fight in which George is a participant.

"Mom's my pal and my inspiration—and I fight for her," George said yesterday. "I'll get her that home in another year—I hope."

Abrams, incidentally, is quite an expert cartoonist, and will ply this trade when he hangs up his gloves.

S. Carolina Is Favorite In Big Game

By Shirley Povich.

Prepared to bow out of Catholic University football with the finest performance they have yet delivered, seven seniors carry the hopes of the Fyling Cardinals this morning in a Thanksgiving Day battle with South Carolina's Gamecocks.

Inspired football in the presence of homecoming alumni is the hope of Coach Dutch Bergman as he sends his team against an opponent which tied North Carolina, conqueror of Duke.

Preceding the 10:30 a. m. kick-off will be an elaborate program of pregame ceremonies in which Miss Catholic University and Miss South Carolina will exchange greetings. South Carolina fans will be in a special section near the 50-yard lines.

South Carolina, with a distinct advantage in man-power, is the slight favorite to beat the Cardinals, but Bergman's team has not yet reached its peak, C. U. coaches believe. Tradition will be on the side of Catholic U., which has unfailingly received sensational performances from its seniors in their valedictory game.

Munhall Among Seven.

The seven who will be appearing for the last time in a C. U. football uniform are Charley Munhall, Irish Carroll and Salvatore Greco, backs; and Leo Katalinas, Eddie White, John Chludenski and Capt. Vic Sochon, guards.

The Gamecocks will be presenting in Capt. Jack Lyons a scatback who weighs only 155 pounds, a ball carrier who has been a scoring threat in every game the Carolinians have played thus far this season. Lyons shares with Robert (Red) Snyder, the chief ball-toting duties of the Gamecock backs.

Marked men also will be Ed Stillwell, Carolina end, and Ed Clary, fullback, who recently averaged 58 yards on 12 punting attempts.

Watch Mr. Carroll.

Maurice (Irish) Carroll, who in recent games has returned to the form that stamped him one of the cleverest backs in the history of Washington football, is C. U.'s chief answer to the talents of the Carolina backs.

Carroll will be operating in a starting backfield that also will include Munhall, Vidnovic and Sarelas. On the sidelines and certain to see frequent duty will be Indian Joe Guyon, sophomore star.

The 1937 homecoming ceremonies will surpass in color and showmanship all previous homecomings. Both colleges will present gaily costumed bands and the South Carolinians are introducing John Campbell and Francis Fetner, acrobatic cheer leaders whose fame is widespread. Between halfs, the Sons of America Drum and Bugle Corps will parade across the field and C. U. trackmen will engage in a half-mile relay.

Schalk to Manage Indianapolis Team

Chicago, Nov. 24 (U.P.).—Ray Schalk, one-time "iron-man" catcher of the Chicago White Sox, today signed a contract to manage the Indianapolis club of the American Association.

Schalk has just finished his sixth season as manager of Buffalo's International League club. Wade Killifer resigned this week as Indianapolis manager to take over the new Hollywood club in the Pacific Coast League.

1,000 Japanese Cadets Hold First Track Meet

Nishinomiya, Japan, Nov. 24 (AP).—A thousand cadets competed today in the first military track meet ever conducted here.

Events included sprints, broad jump and walking races—all the contestants in full war equipment—hand grenade throwing, sand bag construction and a cartridge-carrying relay.

Stable Manager Fined.

Toronto, Nov. 24 (AP)—Ewell Lane, manager of the stables of Mrs. Ruth Ludington Carpenter of Rochester, N. Y., today was fined $100 and costs or 30 days in jail for administering chewed ginger to a carriage horse entered in competition at the Royal Winter Fair Horse Show.

Celanese Plays Here.

The annual Thanksgiving Day soccer clash between Heurich's, leading Recreation League club, and the Celanese team of Cumberland, Md., will take place this afternoon on the Polo Field, at 2:45 o'clock.

White Sand Wins The Dunnock, Feature at Bowie, By Three Lengths

Divvy Dan Is Bumped Off for Revenge.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937 for The Washington Post.

New York, Nov. 24.—The moleskin murder mystery:

A leather-lunged newsboy bustled into our car on the Lexington Avenue Express. Above the subway's muffled roar, I heard him yelling his wares. His words electrified me—startled me almost out of my seat. He shouted, "Wuxtra! wuxtra! Read all about the big moidah! Famous football picker is bumped off! Divvy Dan is Moidahed!"

* * * *

* * * *

Tearing into the story, I learned that police claimed a revenge motive—and that they suspected "a certain sports writer with a press association"—a sports writer who had been associated with Divvy, the fugitive football prognosticator. I ejaculated, "Holy catamounts! They must mean me!"

* * * *

At police headquarters, I gave myself up—and it took more than four hours before I could clear myself of suspicion. My alibi was that at the time Divvy was shot I had been in my four-room Bronx estate impressing one of my daughters with the futility of saying "ah—nerts!" to her grammar school teacher.

* * * *

It seemed that the detectives suspected me immediately because they found near Divvy's body an envelope addressed to me. In it were his football selections for this week. And pinned to his tattered coat was a sheet of white paper on which was typewritten: "He picked Yale to beat Harvard." The detectives figured I had bumped poor Divvy off for doing me wrong with that selection.

* * * *

I sent the human bloodhounds baying on another trail. I said the slayer must have been someone who wagered heavily on Divvy's selections. They are working on that tip now. I convinced them I was the last guy in the world who might have done the job, because Divvy had been my selector for two seasons. He did very well in '36, but very poorly this year—after escaping from the sanatorium just before the current season opened. He had been hiding out from keepers and police. During most of the season he tried to pick winners by communing with the occult. Last week, he picked 29 right, 11 wrong and suffering three ties, for a right and wrong average of .725. This boosted his average for the season to .712.

* * * *

Investigation Blues Beaten by Trojans

The Trojans handed Bureau of Investigation Blues a good trimming last night in the Southeast Community Center Basketball League at Hine Junior High school by a score of 33 to 21. The Trojans started off in the lead and held a slight margin at the half. "Slim" Jennison got going in the second session and tallied six goals from the field from all angles. Levin also had his eye on the hoop, scoring four double pointers.

The Anacostia Business Men defeated Southeast Merchants in the opener, 46 to 37. Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock Procurement meets Marvin Methodists and at 9, Riggs Bank plays Bureau of Investigation.

Flat Lance Takes Place In Long Test

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE, MD., Nov. 24—W. E. Johnson's White Sand, winner of a photo decision earlier in the meeting, gave the camera a vacation today as s[illegible] led five others to the imaginary wire and defeated T. H. Somerville's Flat Lance by three lenghts. The Bomar Stable's Noble Boy finished third in the all ages test over the mile and seventy yards course.

White Sand was installed a 3-2 favorite in the race known as The Dunnock and those familiar with her style of running had no anxious moments. Jockey Eddie DeCamillis had the mount and allowed the daughter of St. Germans to settle into her best stride before sending her on the outside where she slowly but surely got to the front.

Once in command, White Sand just galloped along and had speed to spare despite the fact that Flat Lance was being hard driven by Pocke, Moose Peter James A. and Noble Boy, most prominent in the early running, were tired horses at the finish. Mr. Canron made up some ground but too late to get in the money circle.

A holiday-eve crowd of 8,000 witnessed the program, marked by a $24.40 daily double on the "8 and 3" combination of Room Service and Crestonian. Both were photo finish winners and on the outside in the pictures.

Room Service, a daughter of The Porter, emerged from the maiden ranks in the first race, defeating 11 others of her sex in a 6-furlong sprint. Room Service had to overcome a sluggish start but Jockey Joe O'Malley sent her whizzing through the stretch and she was up to win the photo decision from Heraldic. Mother's Love was third. The winner paid $6.70 and ran in the colors of G. S. Harrison, jr. Yancey Christmas saddled the filly.

Glisten, a field horse, scored a half-length victory over Bunny Baby in the second race and brought his backers a $10.90 mutuel. Ridden by V. Thompson and racing for J. J. McDonald, Glisten came with speed that held his rival safe in the closing sixteenth. Top Billing was third in the group of 11 claiming sprinters.

Last out of the starting gate, L. Romm's Crestonian developed enough momentum in the stretch to take a photo verdict from A. C. Compton's Apprehend. Balcony, representing the field betters, was third. Crestonian was a $5.50 favorite and was given a rousing ride by Apprentice Jockey G. Napier.

Flying Orphan, a $9.70 shot, turned in a powerful race to win the day's fourth event by a length margin from the favored Far Cry. Ebony Parasol was third among the dozen cheap ones competing at a mile and 70 yards. Apprentice Jockey R. Eccard went to the outside with the Fying Ebony filly, got her to the front hearing the stretch and withstood the closing rush of Far Cry.

Copper Tube, a $3.80 public choice, came from last to be the winner of the sixth race under the good handling of Jockey Nick Wal. Hammel, a long shot, was second, beaten two and a half lengths, with Saxopal a distant third. A field of 11 competed in the mile and a furlong event.

Star Porter proved the fourth winning favorite of the program, the son of The Porter taking the decision by a length and a half. Commish Geary was second, ahead of Centennial. The winer paid $3.70

MacLeod Is Elected Dartmouth's Captain

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 24 (AP).—Robert F. MacLeod, Glen Ellyn, Ill., right halfback for two years, will lead the Dartmouth football team next year.

He was unanimously elected by the lettermen yesterday to succeed Merrill Davis. He also plays basket ball and may try for track next year. He was a hurdler in high school.

Time Out! BY CHET SMITH

Miss Glutz, make a note to have a detour sign placed on this building!

At The Post WITH BILL BENNINGS

DEAR AL:

Johnny Shanks, Washington, D. C. jockey, expects to have a busy session at Charles Town. At Hagerstown last May, Shanks' mount fell at the first turn and the boy broke his wrist. He expected to be back in the saddle in a month. However, the bone healed in a manner that kept Shanks from having the grip so necessary in riding. He believed that his jockey days were over. However, he was persuaded to go to Johns Hopkins Hospital. There the arm was rebroken and this time it healed perfectly. Shanks was up for the first time since the accident aboard Patient Saint. The horse had little chance but Shanks kept him close and reported no ill effects after the race. The schooling list here includes 31 horses with Inactive and Jackie D. the latest additions. H. J. Bundscho claimed San Antioca for $2,500 from Baul Codd who is reported to have purchased him the day before from Selby Burch for $3,500. Mutuel tickets on the Thanksgiving Handicap will be sold from the first race to post time. There is no excuse for anybody being shut out. Charles Town's daily double will be one the second and third races. More than 50 horses left today for Florida. BILL.

First race—Mon Doit might be the right one in the day's opener. Gives away weight to most of these, but has indicated that he will like the route. Sure Swift and Newark are fair juveniles and should go well in this field.

Second race—Felwyn was well meant last out and had much trouble before closing with a rush in the final quarter. Clear sailing would bring this one brackets. Pencader met interference in the stretch last out and is dangerous here. Silvery Way and Our Ship nave outside chances.

Third race—Merrily On likes this track and appears headed for win money. Venetian hasn't run up to trials and will be a threat if he shows one of his good efforts. Prairie Prince, on the reserve list, is a possible surprise if in action.

Fourth race—Mattapony is too consistent to pass up even in this high-grade company. Needs only to break with the field to take down the chief award. Kingsbury and Reminiscent for the place and show.

Fifth race—Im' going to climb out on the limb in the Thanksgiving Handicap and pick Unfailing. This one has been carefully groomed for this one race and gets in light. Not a spot to risk the family jewels, but a good horse with a good chance. Masked General also gets in light and I'm going to toss out that last effort in the deep mud. Burning Star and Calumet Dick, the heavy weights of the party, are due respect.

Sixth race—Jackie D. gets in light for a change and this long route is probably what he needs. I'm going to string along. Old Field won his last and looms as the one to beat. Continuity, to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Some Boy, Sleuth and Canpra is the way I prefer them in the day's finale. The first-named packs too much late punch for these, I believe.

Best bet—Felwyn.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROOM SERVICE, $6.70, $3.90, $2.70; HERALDIC, $5.40, $3.10; MOTHERS LOVE, $5.50.

ROOM SERVICE, lacking early speed as usual, came with rush on outside in stride and was up in concluding stride. HERALDIC, in thick of contention from start, disposed of BRILLIANT BLUE and MOTHERS LOVE to open lead and just failed to last. MOTHERS LOVE was rushed to front, set pace under hustling tactics, but weakened in closing eighth.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:05½. Off 2:10½. Winner, J. J. McDonald's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLISTEN (field), $10.90, $5.10, $3.40; BUNNY BABY, $6.30, $4.70; TOP BILLING, $5.20.

GLISTEN, off alertly, was kept in middle of track in better going and alternated in setting and pressing pace with BUNNY BABY, rallying to get up in final sixteenth. BUNNY BABY saved ground and was hard ridden, but could not resist winner. TOP BILLING, off slowly, hung after reaching contention. DAGGER'S DRAWN gained gradually in final quarter. LAST CHASE was going well at end.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:36½. Off 2:39½. Winner, L. Romm's b. m. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRESTONIAN, $5.50, $3.90, $3.00; APPREHEND, $7.10, $5.10; BALCONY (field), $4.70.

CRESTONIAN, last away, bettered position steadily on outside and came with good energy in final sixteenth to barely get up. APPREHEND was forced to race on the rail during early running, swung out to better position, took command, but could not resist winner. BALCONY closed gamely. DOKAS gained sharply leaving backstretch, but was held safe thereafter. TITIAN KIDDIE stopped after pressing pace.

DAILY DOUBLE, ROOM SERVICE AND CRESTONIAN, PAID $24.40.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:06½. Off 3:10½. Winner, C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING ORPHAN, $9.70, $3.30, $2.90; FAR CRY, $2.70, $2.60; EBONY PARASOL, $4.80.

FLYING ORPHAN, within striking distance of leaders from start, forged to front approaching stretch and held away under drive. FAR CRY worked his way to contention along backstretch and closed gamely. EBONY PARASOL weakened after reaching contention in late stages. FLYING FEET closed full of run. BOOSEL was unprepared for break and was virtually left.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For all ages. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:35½. Off 3:37½. Winner, W. E. Johnson's b. f. Panthers Retain Place at Top in Gridiron Ratings

Alabama Is Second; Both to Face Test

Pitt Meets Duke on Saturday; Let-Down May Prove Costly; Tide Battles Stubborn Foe in Vandy; Fordham Is Third.

THE TOPPERS.

1	Pittsburgh	96.3	14	Alma	82.8
2	Alabama	95.0	15	Detroit	82.5
3	Fordham	93.3	16	Tulane	82.5
4	L. S. U.	91.7	17	N. Carolina	81.6
5	Duke	89.9	18	Harvard	81.6
6	Minnesota	86.9	19	Santa Clara	81.4
7	Ohio State	86.7	20	Arkansas	80.9

11	Ga. Tech	84.4	24	Texas Chr.	79.9
12	California	84.1	25	Army	79.0
13	Tennessee	83.5

The Panthers from Pittsburgh again are leading the national football parade by the slim margin of 1.2 power point, and now Pittsburgh goes to Durham to meet the Duke gridders. Duke apears to be the only team other than Fordham that has the playing power necessary to stop the Panther should the Pitt griders let down or become overconfident.

Alabama, rated 95.0, meets the strong Vanderbilt team, rated 80.5, in a Thanksgiving Day battle at Nashville. The Tide seems to be too strong for the Vanderbilt eleven and probably will roll over it.

Harvard, rated above Yale all season in playing power, man-handled Yale, as expected, by the one touchdown margin. This win places the Harvard Crimson on top of the Big Three.

Anything Could Happen as the Golden Glovers Finished

Julius Stommell charges into Mike Bagdassian in the 135-pound novice bout but the latter, a Washington Boys Club representative, won by a technical K. O. in the second round.

2,200 Watch Final Golden Gloves Bouts

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Buster Miller and Kim Kustenas, a pair of dynamite-fisted 126-pounders, stole the show last night as the city Golden Gloves champions were crowned before a satisfied capacity audience of 2,200 at Turner's Arena.

Miller, a Washington Boys' Club boxer, won a majority decision over Kustenas in a two-fisted, toe-to-toe slugging match that brought down the house and caused a five-minute round of mingled cheering and booing. Miller was later justly named as the outstanding senior class fighter.

The remainder of the 14-event card of Novice and Open class events were technical K. O.'s and unanimous decisions, with the Miller-Kustenas bout the only split decision on the three-hour program.

Jim Brady, carrying the Blue and Gray colors of Georgetown University, won the heavy title with a convincing win over Don Stetson, National Guard, in the final bout of the program.

Brady Wins Victory.

Brady jabbed and punched his way to a clear-cut victory over Stetson, who was a bloody mass but stayed the limit with the gamest stand of the night. Brady was hitting hard and often but could not floor the guardsman, despite his superiority.

The Open Class, whose winners receive a pair of Golden Gloves from the Washington Herald, a pair of boxing shoes and a trip to Boston for the National event, was opened by Willie Papp, who scored a clean-cut victory in the 112-pound class, over Bernie Perry, a Police Boys Club representative, was not pressed in scoring the decision.

Gilbert Mayo followed in the 118-pound class by gaining an early advantage over Georgie Pickerel, of the National Guard, and holding the advantage through the last round when Pickerel rallied with a stormy assault but could not overcome the margin.

Carroll Wright, of the Terminal Y, won a technical knockout over Whitey France midway in the second round in the 135-pound class, when France's eye was opened with a series of lefts and rights to the head and Denny Hughes stopped the fight to save France further punishment.

Bob Mathias Winner.

Bobby Mathias, the red-haired National Guard favorite, met a tartar in El Brookman, but won the decision of the three officials by landing more and harder punches. Mathias was in trouble several times, but, in turn, had Brookman near a K. O. in the late stages of the bout.

Bob Grimm, third of the four National Guard representatives to finish on the short end of the decision, lost in the second round to Bobby Schwartz, the Alexandrian, representing the A. B. & W. Terminal. Schwartz knocked Grimm down three times in the second round but the latter protested in vain when Hughes stopped the bout, although he was barely able to stagger to his feet.

Jack Wadsworth, Washington Boys Club, won the Novice Class outstanding fighter award by his well-earned victory over Bob Hagedorn, who stood three rounds, but was unable to match the classy exhibition of the winner.

Novice Class Finals.

112-Pound Class.

118-Pound Class.

126-Pound Class.

135-Pound Class.

147-Pound Class.

160-Pound Class.

Charles Cox (Merrick Boys Club) won unanimous decision over Franklin Peters (Merrick Boys Club).

Open Class Finals.

112-Pound Class.

Willie Papp (Metropolitan Police Boys Club) won unanimous decision over Bernie Perry (Mercury A. C.).

118-Pound Class.

Gilbert Mayo (A. B. & W. Terminal) won unanimous decision over Georgie Pickeral (National Guard).

126-Pound Class.

Buster Miller (Washington Boys Club) won majority decision over Kim Kustenas (Washington Boys' Club).

135-Pound Class.

147-Pound Class.

160-Pound Class.

175-Pound Class.

Bobby Schwartz (A. B. & W. Terminal) won technical knockout over Bob Grimm (National Guard), 1 minute 30 seconds, second round.

Heavyweight Class.

Congress Heights Will Clash Today With Anacostians

The game that is fast nearing a status as the sandlot classic of the city—Congress Heights vs. Anacostia Eagles—will be played for the ninth straight year this afternoon at the Gonzaga Stadium.

The site of the game was finally agreed upon last night after a heated debate between players of both squads.

Congress Heights, unbeaten this season, will be meeting in the Eagles a team that has lost only one game. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

All previous games between the two teams have been won by the Congress Heights eleven, which will meet the Warwicks for the city unlimited championship if victorious today. Interhigh school series football officials will officiate the battle.

McKee Named Captain.

Fredericksburg Eyes Title.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 24.—The Eastern Virginia Class B High School football championship will be decided here tomorrow morning, when Fredericksburg High meets the South Norfolk High Tigers on the Athletic Field.

2-Week's Victory Spurt Earned '37 Title for Helen Dettweiler

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A consecutive two-week victory spurt in midsummer that carried her to Maryland and District championships earned for Helen Dettweiler the coveted role of the District's outstanding linkswoman of the 1937 season.

By the margin of the final round triumph in the city championships over her nearest rival, Mrs. Betty Meckley, Miss Dettweiler gained the nod for the top post over the Middle Atlantic champion.

Marion Brown, Manor's twin-club champion and Mid-Atlantic medalist and finalist, was a step behind in third place. Her first important tournament victory in The Washington Post match play event was followed by a fall season of successive triumphs, climaxed by the Middle Atlantic, her most impressive showing in a major affair.

Mrs. Walter Stokes, the freshman star of the District Women's Golf Association, fulfilled a host of press clippings by winning three medal-play events and placing in a majority of the others to gain the fourth place notch. Failure to pass the second round of the three major events prevented a higher ranking.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton, the Chevy Chase member, who played in only two events, the city and Maryland State championships, was next, in view of her respective semi-final and final round performances.

Ellen Kincaid, Congressional, completed the roster of the younger stars by annexing the sixth place berth. Winner of the opening and closing medal-play events of the season, at Washington and Beaver Dam, Miss Kincaid dotted the season with several other prize-winning performances.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern, who defeated Helen Dettweiler and Ellen Kincaid in successive days of the Mid-Atlantic play, was bracketed in the seventh place post, followed in order by Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor; Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. K. S. Giles, the latter representing the practically obsolete group of women southpaws, completing the first ten.

Despite Miss Dettweiler's 2-to-1 margin over Mrs. Meckley in major championships, it was hard to choose between the two for the leading golfer as Mrs. Meckley dominated the season after losing her city championship in June.

In five cup events the Indian Spring ace was the low medal winner. In two she required only 80 strokes in winning, at Woodmont and Washington. With Maury Fitzgerald and Volney Burnett as partners she tied and won a pair of mixed events.

Marion Brown's climb to the third place post was the highlight of the late season play as the blonde star's play jumped to its predicted standard and promises another rise next year.

Gonzagas In Elizabeth For Contest

Washington Prep School Eleven Ready for Holiday Game.

By Jack Munhall.

A Staff Correspondent.

First indications of the tremendous interest being manifested everywhere over the classic came when several hundred students and townfolk greeted the train with lusty yells. Coach Frank Kirleski, accompanied by most of the Thomas Jefferson football team, was on hand to extend welcome to Coach Orrel Mitchell and his lads.

When introductions were in order, the party progressed to Winfield Scott Hotel, where a gala luncheon and civic reception was held. The luncheon was cosponsored by the chamber of commerce and the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs, who immediately made Gonzaga's representatives feel at home. Mayor Joseph A. Brophy formally greeted both squads and expressed a desire for a record turnout for the game scheduled for 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

After luncheon both squ

Steel Activity Edges Upward To 33 Per Cent

Of Five Major Areas Two Report Higher Rate, Two Even and One Lower.

New York, Nov. 24.—Steel ingot production this week is estimated by the Iron Age at 33 per cent of capacity, two points lower than last week but two points higher than the American Iron & Steel Institute estimate of 31 per cent on Monday. For the first time since the week before Labor Day, the decline has apparently been halted at Chicago, where both production and consumption of steel is more widely diversified than in other industrial areas. Ingot output has risen three points at Chicago to 30½ per cent. Of the five major producers in that district, two report higher operations, two remain at last week's rate and the other shows a decline.

In the Cleveland-Lorain district there has been an even sharper increase, from 18 to 29 per cent, but this is mainly due to resumption of operations at two Cleveland plants that were idle last week while awaiting an accumulation of orders. As those plants may operate intermittently until business has definitely forged ahead, this gain possibly has less significance than the improvement at Chicago.

Detroit at 58 Per Cent.

There has been no further decline at Detroit, which is at 58 per cent; in southern Ohio, where the average rate is 27 per cent, or in the South, where new rail orders have maintained last week's rate of 46 per cent. At Pittsburgh, however, there has been a sharp decline of nine point to 26 per cent, while the Wheeling-Weirton area is off eight points to 55 per cent; the Youngstown area off four points to 30 per cent, eastern Pennsylvania down two points to 38 per cent, Buffalo is six and a half points lower at 21½ per cent, and St. Louis off six points to 25 per cent.

While the evidence at Chicago of a slight upturn in new business does not carry through the entire steel industry, some segments of which are still experiencing a downward trend in orders, there is a spotty improvement which at a time like this attracts more than ordinary attention.

Singularly, the railroad and construction industries, from which little immediate help had been expected, are prominent in new business and prospects, while the automobile industry, upon which the steel industry's hopes have been pinned for many weeks, is not only taking less steel but its December production schedules have been revised downward to an extent that promises little aid for the mills unless orders should be placed some time during next month for January shipment. General Motors plants probably will not operate more than 12 days in December; the Chrysler plants 15 days and the Hudson plants 40 to 50 per cent of capacity.

Business Failures Rise.

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the week ended November 18 rose to 206, compared with 172 in the five-day business week preceding and 143 for the week a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Cotton Lower; Range Narrow

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Cotton moved irregularly today with December steady but other months losing early gains. March sold off from 8.01 to 7.95 and closed at the low with final prices 5 points net higher to 1 lower.

Steadier Liverpool cables and foreign buying were features of early trading. There was a little December liquidation owing to issuance of notices against 4,200 bales. A large part of the trading was represented by exchanging between deliveries. Reports that the House farm bill would be more stringent than previously indicated brought in a little buying.

Exchange Disciplines Stock Specialist

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today took disciplinary action against a specialist in stock of Nash-Kelvinator for failing "to fulfill his duty" in that capacity. "The covering committee," an announcement said, "having found John J. Phelan guilty of the charge and specification, directed that he should be prohibited from acting as a specialist on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange for a period of three months and that he should be censured by the president of the exchange."

Power Production.

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended November 20 rose to 2,224,213,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of 2.1 per cent over 2,176,557,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week, and an advance of 2.5 per cent over 2,169,715,000 kilowatt hours in the comparable 1936 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Wheat Prices Sag as Export Sales Decline

Rallies Are Offset Also by Lower Prices for Securities.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Faced by intermittent downturns of securities and by unabated dearth of North American wheat export trade, Chicago wheat values averaged lower today despite spasmodic rallies.

Leading specialists said maintenance of wheat price gains was not to be expected until European buying of United States and Canadian wheat broadened importantly. Statements were current that although much larger export purchases of wheat from this country appeared sooner or later inevitable, continued backwardness of foreigners as to entering the market on a liberal scale was undermining confidence of speculative holders.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅜ lower to ⅜ higher compared with yesterday's finish, December 89⅝@89¾, May 89¼@89⅜, July 84⅝@84¾, Corn ¼-½ down, December 53¾, May 56½@56⅝, Oats ¼ off to ⅛ up, rye at ½ cent decline to ¼ advance, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to 10 cents bulge.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift Irregularly in Pre-Holiday Dullness; U. S. Bonds Firm; Wheat Lower.

New York, Nov. 24.—The vagaries of a market gave stocks an irregular appearance on small sales volume of around a million shares. United States bonds softened and then rallied a bit toward the close. Commodities continued in a weak position. December wheat closed an eighth of a cent down at 89¾ cents a bushel.

Early prices in the stock market were no worse than irregular, and it was not until afternoon that the marekt began to look weaker than yesterday. In so far as the reading of newspaper headlines and stories influenced the market, the effect must have been about even. Public utility officials who have come from the talks with the President seemed to feel modertely hopeful of a favorable solution to the problem of Government competition with the industry. The impression gained in Wall Street from the interview seemed to be a shade less optimistic than that which would be created by taking at face value the results as interpreted at the White House.

In any event the business depression is making its mark on Administration policy, even though nothing has been learned yet to indicate that some persons in authority in Washington still are obessed with the idea that the stock market break has been largely a personal matter and that it is not a true reflector of economic conditions, to say nothing of its value as a barometer. On other counts the day brought some setbacks. Stock exchange members were disconcerted by the sharpness of the attack on market management made by Chairman Douglas of the SEC. Opposition is developing in Congress to members who have been counting heavily upon early action to revise taxation in favor of business.

Trade Improvement.

Trade news had its less dark spots. The Iron Age, in reviewing the week in the steel industry finds a "spotty" improvement which at a time like this attracts more than ordinary attention." The trade expects early replenishment buying. Demand on new business account is to be expected mainly from the public utility and the railroad industries. That demand depends, in the one case, on an assurance of a change in Government policy which will permit the public utilities to continue as solvent and privately owned concerns and in the other case, upon an early increase in freight rates.

Railroad freight traffic fell sharply last week and the earnings reports now coming for October show a sharp fall in revenues. Unless a considerable increase in traffic takes place, something which scarcely can be hoped for, or higher rates are granted, or both, or unless operating costs—i. e., wages—fall rapidly, something also which does not seem to be a near-term possibility, the roads will curtail rather than expand purchases this winter.

Public utility shares did not act as though investors expected any great earnings boom to follow the conversations between the President and the utility executives. American Telephone dragged a point or so lower and fractional declines were the rule in the utility group. As often happens when other sections of the market are weak or unsettled, the airplane shares improved. Moderate advances were made in the half dozen stocks making up that market.

Leading stocks mostly fell 1 to 2 points, but their weakness was greater than that of the market as a whole. Chesapeake Corporation, selling ex dividend one-fifth of a share of Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad shares, rose more than a point. A few cash transactions took place around yesterday's last price. Du-Pont sold below par for the first time in over two years.

A scattering of preferred stocks and inactive common shares dipped 2 to 6 points on one or two sales. The thin ranks of stocks selling above $100 a share were further depleted by the Hercules Powder split. At its best Steel sold a fraction above the previous close, but most of the time it changed hands a point or more lower.

Accusations.

Although no visible effect on stock prices was caused by the blast of cold air that blew down from Washington with the text of the charges made against the Stock Exchange by Chairman Douglas of the SEC, the matter made up the bulk of Wall Street conversation today. At least the atmosphere was made a little clearer by the SEC's statement of position, which is that a little more time will be granted the Stock Exchange to reorganize its management policies, but after that much deeper cuts in policy will have to be made to satisfy the SEC. The best thing that can be said about Chairman Douglas's brief against the Stock Exchange is that he did not accuse the exchange of bringing about this bear market. If the Douglas statement is to be regarded as an answer to President Gay of the Stock Exchange, who some time ago placed the blame for lower prices on the SEC, it was in the nature of a punitive rejoinder rather than of a buck passing play.

Barking Up Wrong Tree

Opinions may differ on the extent of the intensification of price swings which the SEC regulations have caused just as they quite obviously differ on the question of how much Stock Exchange members trading intensifies fluctuations or trends to stabilize the market. No serious person, nevertheless, maintains that any of those things brought on the decline in the market that began last March or that the future of prices will be much affected by trading regulations.

Chrysler Motor To Lay Off Workers

Detroit, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Chrysler Corporation notified its employes today of a curtailment in employment, effective at once. All plants will be affected. A downward revision of production schedules necessitated the reduction.

There were reports that layoff notices were given to 25 per cent of the employes but one corporation representative said the actual percentage was much smaller than that. No figures were made public. The company has been employing between 50,000 and 60,000.

October Output Of Cigarettes Sets New High

Production of small cigarettes reached a new high for October with a total of 13,892,142,613, which compares with 13,203,851,027 for the same month last year, according to comparative data of tax-paid products compiled by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. This was an increase of 688,219,586 over October of last year.

Large cigar production for the month showed a decrease of 33,549,153 when compared with the same month last year. Total production for last month amounted to 517,565,260 and 551,114,413 during October of 1936.

Small cigar production last month totaled 17,897,560, which compares with 17,140,080 for October, 1936. Production of large cigarettes for last month amounted to 308,870 as compared with 177,900 for the similar period of 1936.

Production of large cigars from Puerto Rico decreased during October from a total of 369,050 as compared with 5,347,900 for the same month of the previous year.

Curb Prices Dip; Trading Lighter

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Steady selling pressure brought losses of fractions to around a point in the curb market today. Higher priced specialties, utilities and oils were the most active.

Newmont Mining broke 3¾ points to 52 while Aluminum Co. dropped 1¾ to 73. Down around a point were Great Atlantic & Pacific 55 and American Cyanamid "B" 20½. Fractional losers included American Gas & Electrical 25⅝, American Light & Traction 13⅝, Creole Petroleum 22, Electric Bond & Share 10¾, Gulf Oil 35, Niagara Hudson 8⅛, St. Regis Paper 3½ and United Gas 4⅞.

Countering the general trend were Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Sherwin Williams, Standard Power & Light, Sunray Oil and Wright Hargreaves. Transactions totaled 209,000 shares which compares with 290,000 shares Tuesday.

Lincoln Service Corp. Votes 75 Cents Extra

At a meeting of the directors of the Lincoln Service Corporation, industrial bankers, held on this date, the regular quarterly dividend of 87½ cents per share was declared on the 7 per cent preferred stock of the corporation, and the regular quarterly 25-cent dividend distribution and an extra 75-cent dividend distribution was declared on the company's common stock.

Both the preferred and common stock dividends are payable December 28 to stockholders of record as of November 30.

Directors of the State Loan Co. have declared the twenty-seventh consecutive regular dividend af 1½ per cent on the preferred profit-sharing stock. The dividend is payable December 1 to stockholders of record on November 1.

Wholesale Sales Drop in 5th District

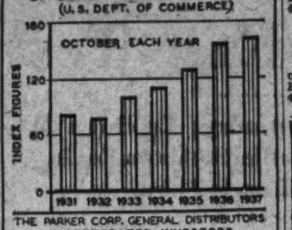
Richmond, Va., Nov. 24 (AP).—Sales in four or five wholesale lines declined last month in the Fifth Federal Reserve districts from the October, 1936, sales, the bank said today.

The only increase for the month was reported in hardware, with grocery, dry goods, shoes and drugs dropping off from 1 per cent to 13.2 per cent.

Associated Gas Output.

New York, Nov. 24.—For the week ended November 19, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 92,231,772 units. This is an increase of 2,954,714 units or 3.3 per cent above the same week a year ago.

Rural Retailing Sets New Record



THE PARKER CORP, GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., Nov. 24.—People are still buying goods, at least as far as retail sales indicate. In rural sections sales of general merchandise in October were the largest for any October since this index was first compiled nine years ago.

Am. Smelting Votes $1 Extra

New York, Nov. 24.—Directors of American Smelting & Refining Co. declared today a special dividend of $1 on the common stock, payable December 22 to stock of record December 1. In November the company paid $1.75.

American Locomotive.

Directors of American Locomotive Co. declared a dividend of $7 on the preferred, on account of accumulations, payable December 20 to stockolders of record December 6. As of September 30, accumulations on preferred amounted to $32 a share. The last payment on the preferred was $3, December 18 of last year.

Anaconda Copper.

Directors of Anaconda Copper Mining Co. declared a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable December 20 to holders of record December 3, same as paid in September.

Mathieson Alkali.

Mathieson Alkali Works announced a year-end dividend of 52½ cents on the common and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred, both payable December 23 to stockholders of record December 1.

American Petroleum.

American Petroleum & Transport Co. announced a dividend of $1, payable December 21 to stock of record December 6. It will be paid in 7-year 3½ per cent notes at par following the procedure adopted in paying the previous dividend of 60 cents last December.

Westinghouse Electric.

A payment of $2 on the common stock of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. was added today to the year-end outflow, partly resulting from disbursements to avoid the Federal surtax on undistributed profits.

Steel Scrap Lower.

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—A nominal drop of 50 cents a ton to $13, down $9 from the August top, in the price of No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap was reported today in a dispatch to Dow Jones & Co. from Pittsburgh. Little metal was said to be moving, with steel mills out of the market.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

D. C. Merchants Make Possible Early Shopping

Stores to Open Tomorrow With Complete Stocks for Christmas.

Merchants of Washington, acting through the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, announced yesterday that arrangements had been completed to make Christmas shopping possible earlier this year than ever before.

When Washington stores open tomorrow morning they will be in complete readiness to meet every need of this year's Christmas shopper.

All of the larger and most of the smaller Washington stores are now working on plans for elaborate Christmas windows which will be unveiled for public inspection within the next few days. These will demonstrate many of the newest and most beautiful gift suggestions which have been developed for this year's Christmas shoppers.

Concerted action by Washington merchants to make an earlier showing of their complete Christmas lines was decided upon months ago, as considerable advance preparation was necessary.

A committee from the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, of which Arthur J. Sundlun is chairman, after a careful study of last year's Christmas merchandising decided that Washington shoppers are eager and anxious to make their Christmas purchases well in advance of the busy shopping season. Merchants, therefore, decided that this year they will encourage the tendency, so that the early shoppers would have a distinct advantage over those who wait until late December.

Lineman Hurt Badly In Fall From Pole

Ernest E. Boyden, 26, lineman for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was injured critically last night when he fell from a pole in the rear of 551 Twentyfifth place northeast. Attendants at Garfield Hospital said he suffered fractures of the arm and leg and possibly of the spine.

Capt. Fred French, Retired, Dies at 54

Capt. Fred G. French, 54, U. S. Army, retired, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hosptal.

A native of Toledo, Ohio, Capt. French served as a midshipman in the Navy from 1911 until 1915 when he was transferred to the Army.

He was graduated from the Coast Artillery School, Battery Officers' course, in 1922 and five years later was retired for disability received in lines of duty.

Capt. French is survived by his wife, Mrs. French, and his mother, Mrs. Isabella French, both of who are en route here.

Ex-Rep. Nicholls Is Dead in South

Spartanburg, S. C., Nov. 24 (AP).—Former Representative Samuel J. Nicholls, 53, died last night in a hospital here. He represented the Fourth South Carolina District from 1915 to 1921.

The death of former Representative Nicholls brought expressions of sorrow from members of the State's Congressional delegation.

Senator James F. Byrnes, former law partner of Nicholls and a former colleague in the House, said Nichols had been "so close to me that his sudden death is a great shock and is a source of sincere sorrow." Byrnes said he would attend the funeral.

Representative Heyward Mahon, of Greenville, who holds the House seat occupied by Nicholls from 1915 to 1921, described his predecessor as "an outstanding citizen of the Nation."

Nicholls retired from Congress in 1921 and was succeeded by Representative J. J. McSwain, of Greenville, who died last year.

Mrs. E. I. Wheeler Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Ella I. Wheeler, mother of William W. Wheeler, assistant to the vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., will be held tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., at the home of her son, Millard D. Wheeler, in Baltimore.

Mrs. Wheeler was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for many years and was a frequent visitor here. She also spent part of every summer at her cottage on the old Emory Grove Camp Grounds, Glendon, Md., a gathering place for members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

She is survived by two other sons, William and J. Sommerville Wheeler.

Edward Theis Dies; High Moose Officer

Hempstead, N. Y., Nov. 24 (AP).—Edward H. Theis, 64, deputy supreme director of the Loyal Order of Moose, died today after a long illness.

Theis, for 34 years affiliated with the Moose, saw 1,500 lodges instituted under his leadership. He initiated the then Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in Lodge 15, New York life membership.

City, in 1931, investing him with a

He was a personal friend of the late Samuel Gompers and of Senator James A. Davis, of Pittsburgh, founder of the Moose. He was for many years a business agent for the American Federation of Labor. In 1913 he directed the erection of Mooseheart Shrine at Mooseheart, Ind.

Bob Burns Says—

When I was a boy 17 years old, I use'ta run errands for Doc Meier's drug store down home and one day Doc Meier had'ta run to the postoffice and he told me to watch the store. While he was gone a lady come in the drug store and asked for the proprietor. When I told her I was in charge, the lady pret' near had a fit.

She said "There oughta be a law against puttin' boys in charge of drug stores where there is so much danger of the patrons gettin' the wrong thing!" She said she was gonna report it to the authorities and she had a good mind to make her purchase some place else. I told her it might cause me to lose my job and I begged her to let me try to serve her. Finally she said "Well, all right then—gimme a 2-cent stamp but it don't look right!"
